The Operations of Gen. Grant Against Vicksburgh.

A Great Battle at Edwards' Ferry on Saturday.

Defeat of the Rebel General Pemberton.

A DISPATCH FROM GEN. JOE. JOHNSTON.

Bomberton Driven Across the Big Black and Into His Intrenchments.

Reported Capture of Sixteen Pieces of Artillery.

Narrow Escape of the Rebel General Loring's Command.

HEAVY LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES.

REPORTS FROM CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Friday, May 22.

The Gazette's Murfreesboro' dispatch has contradictory reports from the Mississippi.

One report is, that Gen. GRANT has been driven back from Jackson and Port Gibson, and that Gen. Joe JOHNSTON's forces have possession of the Jackson and Vicksburgh Railroad.

Another report is that Gen. GRANT has beaten Gen. JOHNSTON, and taken possession of the railroad bridge over the Big Black River, which is a most important movement in that section of country, as it entirely cuts off rebel communication with Vicksburgh.

Advices via Cairo say that our loss at Raymond was 71 killed and 300 wounded, and that 65 cars loaded with bacon and corn meal were captured between Raymond and Jackson.

It appears to be Gen. GRANT's intention to march in the rear of Vicksburgh to Haines' Bluff.

Rebel papers state that forces from all parts of the South are on the march to reinforce Gen. JOHNSTON.

A LATER AND BETTER DISPATCH.

CINCINNATI, Friday, May 22.

Information received here from Gen. GRANT's headquarters at Raymond, Miss., shows that it was his intention to destroy all the bridges in his vicinity. After the capture of Jackson he ceased communication with Grand Gulf in consequence of heavy escorts of troops being necessary for such service. The army was provided with rations for eight days.

From Jackson Gen. GRANT was to proceed to Haines' Bluff, and secure a number of transports belonging to the rebels, and prevent their escape up the Yazoo River.

Gen. PEMBERTON is thought to be in front of Gen. GRANT, and Gen. Joe JOHNSTON is supposed to have brought but 5,000 trpoos with him.

It is generally supposed that a great battle would be fought before Vicksburgh surrendered, but of its final capture no one expressed a doubt.

The bridge over the Big Black River has not been destroyed, but is guarded by 5,000 men, with instructions to destroy it if they should be compelled to leave.

Three miles of the railroad near Jackson were torn up when our forces entered that city.

LATEST REPORTS VIA CAIRO.

CAIRO, Friday, May 22.

Accounts of the operations of GRANT's army to the 17th, do not differ materially from the rebel reports already published. The impression is gaining ground that Gen. GRANT is a perfect master of the situation.

Warrenton is in our possession. Teams are constantly employed in hauling stores from that point.

It was reported at Helena that PRICE and MARMADUKE have a force 10,000 strong at Wittsburgh.

Greenville, Miss., a town of some 400 inhabitants, has been entirely destroyed.

NEWS RECEIVED IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 22.

Information has been received confirming the rebel accounts of Gen. GRANT's success in the battles of Friday and Saturday last. The Richmond papers of the 21st also contain further particulars of the disaster to their army. Gen. GRANT, at last accounts, is said to be pushing them northward.

IMPORTANT REBEL REPORTS.

The Richmond papers of May 19, 20 and 21 contain the following highly important intelligence from the vicinity of Vicksburgh:

A DISPATCH FROM GEN. JOE. JOHNSTON.

CAMP BEYERS LEYNGSTON AND BROWNSVILLE, Miss., May 16, 1863.

To Gen. S. Cooper:

Lieut.-Gen. PEMBERTON was attacked by the enemy on the morning of the 16th inst., near Edwards' depot, and after nine hours fighting was compelled to fall back behind the Big Black.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General Com'd'g.

NEWSPAPER DISPATCHES.

BRANDON, Miss., May 17, 1863.

Two gentlemen rode to Jackson to-day and traversed the city. The enemy had evacuated about 3 o'clock. It is supposed that they number about 40,000, and have retreated toward Vicksburgh. Firing has been heard in that direction, and it is supposed that Gen. PEMBERTON is in their rear.

Before leaving they burned the Confederate House, the depots, the penitentiary, GAZZE & PRITCHE'S factory, STEVENS' foundry, LAMPS's hat factory, and a block of buildings on State-street, including the Medical Purveyor's and other Government offices. Also both bridges over Pearl River, and destroyed several miles of the railroad track.

It is reported in Mobile that some of this burning was done before we rifled. The Confederate States was burned by the proprietor.

MOBILE, Ala., Monday, May 18.

The special reporter of the Advertiser, at Jackson, May 17, says:

Arrived in reconnoitering train. The Catholic church of this place was destroyed, and the Mississippian Office gutted, the presses broken, and the type thrown into the street. The furniture in the Capitol was badly abused, and the Governor's mansion demolished. Ladies were robbed of jewelry and money. All the stores were sacked, and their contents destroyed, iron safes broken open. The railroad was badly torn up for several miles, and the telegraph wires torn down. About three hundred negroes from Hinds County joined the Yankees. The country was plundered generally. Farmers estimated the damage at from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. Much destruction and suffering prevails.

The enemy evacuated on Friday and Saturday, retreating hastily. No serious engagement took place. The last of the rear guard left about two o'clock, when our cavalry pickets dashed in, killed a Federal Colonel and captured two others.

The Yankees captured and paroled 200 South Carolinians and Georgians.

MOBILE, Ala., May 18, 1863.

The Advertiser and Register's special reporter, under date of Jackson, May 18, says:

There was a heavy and indecisive battle near Edwards' depot on Saturday. We fell back to our intrenchments. Loss heavy on both sides. Gen. TREZEVANT, of Kentucky, was killed.

MOBILE, Ala., Tuesday, May 19, 1863.

The Register and Advertiser's special reporter at Jackson, in a despatch dated yesterday, says:

The federals sent in a flag of truce this evening for the principal surgeon left in charge of the wounded. The officer in charge of the flag states that in Saturday's fight they lost six hundred men, took sixteen guns, and that our troops fell back across the Big Black, destroying the bridge. They advanced eight miles north, and this morning found Johnston in line of battle.

According to our advices, no artillery was lost, and the bridge was not burned. Our force of twelve thousand men fought two army corps of twenty-four thousand, sustained themselves and fell back at night to their intrenchments. The loss was heavy, and the battle severe and indecisive.

The Yankees are on the way to intercept communication. Rumors, good and bad, are plenty.

MOBILE, Tuesday, May 19.

The special reporter of the Advertiser and Register, under date of the 18th, at Jackson, furnishes the following particulars of Saturday's fight, received from the Adjutant of the Fifteenth Mississippi from Canton.

Last night a battle was fought at Baker's Creek, twenty miles west of Jackson. We whipped the enemy badly until he was reinforced from Jackson. Gen. PEMBERTON then fell back to Big Black Bridge. PEMBERTON estimates our loss at 2,000 and the enemy's at three times that number.

Gen. LORING on the left, was cut off but cut his way through to Chrystals Springs, twenty-five miles south of Jackson—his loss is unknown.

Gen. TRIGGS was killed.

DETAILS OF GRANT'S MOVEMENTS.

Bruinsburgh—Where It is and What it Is—Grand Gulf—The Transportation.

From Our Special Correspondent.

BRUINSBURGH, Miss., Friday, May 1, 1863.

Lest this place may not have enjoyed sufficient notoriety to render its locality known to general readers, it will be necessary, for the sake of distinctness, to state that Bruinsburgh is located on the east bank of the Mississippi River, is ten miles below Grand Gulf, and three hundred and twenty-one above New-Orleans. Its population is, or rather was, composed of a widow (she having sought security from Yankee intrusion at some other point) and her African assistants; the place itself consists of one residence, several negro huts, and a bottomless flatboat. Appreciative people will have no trouble in finding a reason for giving a place such a name; the bare mention of the term will suggest its origin.

Bruinsburgh, hitherto unsung and unknown, is destined to a limited fame, as being the place at which the National army landed and commenced its operations against the left flank of Vicksburgh. What we have been searching for since last Spring—a spot of firm ground near Vicksburgh—has at length been furnished by Bruinsburgh; it is exactly, in fact, what our Generals long have sought and mourned, because they found it not.

Grand Gulf not only presents the same physical conformation as Vicksburgh, but it has other features of resemblance. It has the same powers of resistance; for when we attempted to land in front, it would not allow us to do so, and in consequence we are now attempting to do to Grand Gulf what we have so often attempted in the case of Vicksburgh, viz., to get round it. In this we have been tolerably successful, for to-day our troops are thundering in the very rear of Grand Gulf, with no very poor prospect of possessing the place to-morrow.

When it was found that the gunboats were unable to reduce the defences of Grand Gulf, after a contest whose length and desperateness have been unequaled since the days of iron-clads, it was determined to abandon the attempt to land in front of the place, and effect a footing at some point below. Bruinsburgh was the nearest point from which the bluffs—upon which Grand Gulf is situated—are accessible, and hence it was selected as the landing place. Night before last operations were commenced, and a little after daylight yesterday morning all the gunboats and transports, loaded to the last available inch with troops, rounded to in front of this place, and disgorged their human contents without resistance. From that time till to-night they have labored assiduously at the same business, with a result that placed all the forces necessary across the river before sundown. The transportation of the troops was accomplished with celerity and without accident, save in a single case—in which, however, we met with a serious and irremediable loss. This morning, at about 3 o'clock, the transport Horizon, loaded with a battery of James' rifled guns, was run into, during a fog, by the Tecumseh, and so badly damaged that she had barely time to reach the shore, ere she had sunk to her hurricane-deck. By this casualty we lost one of our largest transports, our best battery, four fires and about sixty horses. We have been unfortunate in our transportation. The Henry Clay and Tigress sunk in passing Vicksburgh, the Anglo-Saxon permanently disabled at the same time, by losing her wheel, the Cincinnati rendered temporarily useless, by exploding a supply-pipe, and, as a finish to this series of misfortunes, the total loss of the Ovetone. We have now but three steamers left in running order—fortunately sufficient for our present limited needs.

Gen. OSTERHAUS' division was the first to land, and as soon after as possible it moved out, and without resistance, crossed a "bottom" of some three miles in width, and gained the heights beyond. As fast as the other divisions came over, they moved out after their predecessor, to find by eight o'clock an ample force on the bluff, to gain which no small resistance was anticipated.

Capture of Port Gibson—The Preliminary Battle—Details of the Engagement—The Field—Desperate Fighting of the Rebels—A Flag of Truce from Gen. Pemberton.

PORT GIBSON, Miss., Saturday, May 2, 1863.

This morning, soon after daylight, our troops entered this place, the rebels having left it last night, miles retiring, about as severely a repulse as any similar one they has received since the breaking out of the rebellion. The battle took place yesterday, at a point distant from here some three or four miles, and about twelve from Bruinsburgh. They marched out day before yesterday with a force of 8,000 men, ten pieces of artillery, and the firm conviction that they would meet and destroy the Yankee army with ease; last night they passed through here in hot haste, minus several of their best officers and nearly or quite a tenth of their whole force in killed and prisoners. They went out jubilant and returned crestfallen.

The road from Bruinsburgh leads across a plantation some three miles and then winds up the bluffs, follows a broken range of Chickasaw Bluffs, and finally leads to this place—one of the most beautiful and wealthy in the State. It is distant seven miles eastward from Grand Gulf, with which it has direct railroad connection—and is situated on the left bank of the Bayou Pierre—a navigable stream emptying into the Mississippi.

Of the particulars of the affair of yesterday I can give you but few details, as from the want of a horse, I was unable to come to the front until to-day. It was a gallantly contested struggle, in which both sides fought with unusual determination; but still it was a mere preparatory skirmish—the rebels have taken up a new position and the battle will probably be fought to-morrow. Within plain reach of the eyes, one can see, a mile or so beyond here, earthworks bristling with cannon and column after column of grey-clad troops moving into position to dispute our passage to Grand Gulf. Yesterday we met their advance—to-morrow we will encounter their main body.

OSTERHAUS, in pushing toward this place, met the advance of the rebels about 1 A. M. yesterday, at a point some six or seven miles from here, just beyond a range of broken country known as Anderson's Hills. A few shots were exchanged, the rebel advance fell back, and our men bivouacked on the ground for the balance of the night. Immediately after daylight the men took their breakfast and then skirmishers were thrown out on both sides of the woods. The rebels during the night had fallen back to a series of heights occupied by the plantation of a man named GARVIN, and here our skirmishers came upon their first line of battle.

A sharp conflict ensued here, which resulted in the falling back of the rebels to another line formed along Anderson's Hill. Here was their main body, occupying a splendid position, protected on its flanks by timber, and containing three batteries of artillery, posted upon commanding heights in a manner that swept the approaches in every direction. Our troops reached this position about noon, and a conflict of the most determined character took place, which resulted in the utter rout of the rebels. About 1 o'clock Gen. McPHERSON's corps arrived on the ground. Gen. LOGAN's division was detailed to turn the right flank of the enemy, which it did in handsome style, charging up a hill and directly upon a battery, which they captured, routing its supports in confusion, and capturing some 250 prisoners. The centre was also at the same time or soon after charged upon and broken by a brigade from Gen. GANT's division. The right and centre being broken, the left gave way, and by 2 P. M. the whole rebel force was in full retreat across Bayon Pierre at this place. The rebels, according to the statement of prisoners, numbered about 10,000, and were commanded by Gen. BOWEN, and a General TRIGGS, who was killed in the action. They lost about 600 prisoners, several hundred wounded, and, perhaps, one hundred killed, among whom was a Colonel and many other lesser officers. Considering their numerical inferiority, the rebels fought splendidly—they gave way inch by inch, afflicted with no panics, and manoeuvring under fire with the coolness of veterans. If they were inferior in numbers, they had the advantage of selecting their own positions, and forcing us to attack them at such points as they pleased. This placed them upon an equality with our forces, and hence all I have said about the gallantry and stubbornness of their men can be justly said of ours.

Gen. GRANT's present army is the very flower of the West; a large majority of them have been hardened by exposure in many a battle storm, while the others are those who remain from the attacks of disease, and have thus become acclimated and prepared to endure all the vicissitudes of this unhealthy Southern country. Their arms are good; their supplies for the present ample; and, in view of these facts, it is safe to assert that it will need a much larger force than they encountered yesterday to conquer them.

The ground fought over is a mile in width by three or four in length. It presents the usual evidence of a struggle—trees and buildings torn with cannon shot, patches of clothing, dead, swollen horses, broken down wagons and caissons, here a wounded man, there a dead one. In one place where the rebels made their last stand, the wheel was knocked from a rifled brass gun, six horses and two rebels were killed, and one caisson exploded by a single shot from one of our batteries—all the evidences of the effects of the fatal missive lay there as I passed through to-day. The rebel dead were being buried by our parties, and their wounded hunted up and taken to the hospitals, where they received the same attention from the surgeons as our own men.

Yesterday morning Gen. BOWEN, the rebel commander, sent in a flag of truce, asking a suspension of hostilities for 24 hours, in order that he might bury his dead and gather up his wounded. This was decidedly mean on the part of the rebel commander, for the reason that the evening, before he had telegraphed to Pemberton for immediate reinforcements and additional supplies of rations and ammunition. The original dispatch was found in the telegraph office. Of course Gen. GRANT refused the request, giving his reasons for so doing, and at the same time stating that our men would see that all due attention should be paid to the rebels in our possession.

As soon as the rear-guard of the Confederates had crossed Bayon Pierre, they set fire to a fine suspension bridge in order to prevent pursuit. This act of vandalism costs the rebels thousands of dollars and inflicts upon residents a serious annoyance. Its only effect upon us was to delay our columns for two or three hours.

Many residents of this place left last night, but a majority of them very sensibly remained. The result thus far has been that not a house has been burned, or a single occupied one plundered; in fact, a very amicable state of feeling seems to have sprung up between the National officers and the citizens. Ladies are promenading the streets, chatting with Yankees at street corners, inaugurating here and there incipient flirtations, and seemingly prepared to make the best of the new regime.

Many of the houses here are of a character equal to some of our finest villas on the Hudson. As to food, they seem far from destitution. I have just finished a dinner at the house of a Mr. BIZZEY, at which I was managed, from out the terrible waste of wood which affects the South, to furnish us with roast turkey and duck, wheat bread, biscuits, corn bread, ham, beans, onions, lettuce, butter, salt—in short, everything necessary to make up a comfortable and substantial meal. I saw nowhere hollow eyes and emaciated bodies, indicating a lack of food; on the contrary, the men are stout and in some instances, rotundity in abdominal development, while the ladies are as plump, rosy, engaging and delicious, as well-fed and well-to-do ladies are generally all the world over. Their dark eyes have lost none of their starry splendor; their lips, as ever, in their purple bloom are a fit resting-place for kisses.

I think the sooner we disabuse ourselves of the idea that the South is starving the better it will be for us—for, if it is not, consequently the success of our endeavors to conquer the rebellion. Every element of strength which the South has, is being put into the rebellion. Every able-bodied man who can shoulder a musket is in the army, and every able-bodied man who can do anything else is at work for the army. Women are doing men's work in the fields, and children are growing up to take their places when they shall have gone to the army. Everything is being made subservient to the cause, and, as I said before, we must not underrate our adversaries because we have whipped them so often. We must not think that because we have whipped them so often we can whip them as easily as we please. We must not think that because we have whipped them so often we can whip them at all. We must not think that because we have whipped them so often we can whip them at any time we please. We must not think that because we have whipped them so often we can whip them at any time we please, or at all, or at any time we please, or at all, or at any time we please, or at all, or factured surplus at an advance, are evidently in no trouble about a supply when they need it. They are even building new mills, and filling them with machinery. I have no doubt that they have an assurance from the very highest quarters, that cotton shall be forthcoming at a fixed and not very remote period.

On what is that assurance based? On the ability of the National Government to conquer the South and open her ports to the world? I cannot come to any such conviction. The Southern loan of $15,000,000 was not subscribed for, and is not kept at a premium, by any such idea. There is beyond reasonable question, a general understanding in England and France, and between the Governments of these countries, that if the South is not subjugated within a certain period—and of the probability of such subjugation they have no belief—her independence is to be acknowledged and guaranteed. They will say—you have had three years and the resources of the world to end this rebellion. If you cannot do it in that time, you never can. The war is too great an injury to the commerce of the world to go on for an indefinite period. We must interfere for our own interests, and in the cause of humanity and civilization. They will say to you as they will to Russia; as France, at least, will say to VICTOR EMANUEL: This has been going on long enough. It becomes a nuisance and must be put a stop to.

There is another fact you are not to lose sight of. Englishmen, as well as others, have pride of opinion. They are not willing to be found in the wrong. Now, there is scarcely an Englishman of either of the great parties, from DERBY and PALMERSTON, RUSSELL and GLADSTONE, down, who have not committed themselves to the success of the rebellion. There is scarcely an Englishman of any political reputation who has not expressed, over and over again, the opinion, not to say wish, that the National Government can never conquer the rebel States. The Liberal Press—I mean the Times, Morning Post, Saturday Review, &c.—have been as decided and as contemptuous in this matter as the Herald, or John Bull, or Press. The nation, with slight exceptions, is committed in opinions and in hopes one way, and it is vain to think they will not "back their opinions," or attempt to realize their hopes. They look for cheap cotton and free trade from the Southern States, and a perpetual checkmate to Northern power and aggression.

The destiny of America is the great problem of the Nineteenth Century. Nowhere in the world is there a question so important. Only a firm faith in an overruling Providence can make the actual position of things endurable.

"Foolish heads may mix and mar:
Wise and sure the issues are."

It is hard to give up the ideal we have all formed and gloried in, of our country's destiny. It is no wonder that millions are ready to die rather than abandon it. It is this ideal of a great, powerful and free Empire, which is moulding the minds of the people, and preparing them for radical changes in Constitutions and Governments. It is for this ideal that the North is fighting—fighting for empire, as Lord RUSSELL said; and we may as well confess it, said truly. People fight for the idea of to-day; not for that of a past century. The people of the North fight for the Union as they wish it to be—without caring very much for what it was at first intended. The Constitution is and will be, not what has been written at some period on parchment, but what the people of to-day, and of the future, shall choose to make it. MONADNOCK.

American Topics.

The New-York correspondent of the London Morning Herald says:

"The immense arrivals of Irish astonish those who are not in the secret. Their passages are paid by the United States Government, and will be charged to enlistment expenses. The sum appropriated for this purpose is $2,000,000, and it is estimated that it will bring over to America 120,000 Irish persons. Of this number it may be safely estimated one-third will enlist; that will cost only $60 each for 60,000, and in any other shape it costs the United States $100 per soldier."

The London Times, in an editorial on the dangers which threaten Vicksburgh and Port Hudson, owing to the success of Admiral FARRAGUT in passing the blockade, says, although Vicksburgh is not yet taken, nor Port Hudson either, and though the capture of both of these places would probably fail to insure safe navigation of the Mississippi, it cannot be denied that the present success of the Northerners may produce material results. It creates a less sensation than the capture of Charleston would have done, but it may prove of greater consequence to them. The Confederates are not likely to be disheartened by the loss of a city, but the capture of Vicksburgh and Port Hudson would open the Mississippi to the States of the Northwest, diminish the growing dissatisfaction of the population of those States, and enable the Federals to claim one more of the real victories of the war.

In the House of Lords on the 7th inst., the proceedings were unimportant.

In the House of Commons, on the same evening, Mr. MONCTON MILNES asked Lord PALMERSTON whether a letter addressed to Earl RUSSELL by Gen. WEAD, the United States Minister at the Court of Brazil, imputing disgraceful conduct to Mr. CHRISTIE, Her Majesty's Minister at Brazil, in reference to the ship Prince of Wales and the officers of Her Majesty's ship Forl, had received any notice from Her Majesty's Government?

Lord PALMERSTON said that Mr. CHRISTIE sat for some time as a member of that House, and many members would recollect the ability with which he performed his duties. He could only say that Mr. CHRISTIE was a gentleman and a man of honor, and with regard to his veracity no man could question that veracity with any semblance of truth. With regard to Gen. WEAD, he (Lord PALMERSTON) well knew him, and therefore he could say nothing. (Laughter and cheers.) As to his letter, this he would say, that it was undoubtedly treated by the noble Lord at the head of the Foreign Office with the entire disregard it justly merited; and if any such letter had been written by a British diplomatist he was quite sure his noble friend, without hesitation, would instantly have dismissed the writer, as having proved himself totally unfit and unsuited to hold any position under Her Majesty's Government. With regard to Mr. CHRISTIE's conduct in the negotiations and the demand upon the Government of Brazil, he had the satisfaction of being enabled to say that it had been fully and entirely approved by Her Majesty's Government. Mr. CHRISTIE had acted with great judgment and with all the forbearance that was compatible with a proper and faithful performance of the orders he had received, and therefore there could be no ground whatever for imputing to Mr. CHRISTIE anything with regard to which any foreign Government could take the slightest offence; but it was a well-known practice in countries which happened to be in that peculiar stage of progress in which Brazil happened at the present moment to find itself, that when their injustice and misconduct compelled a foreign Government to use compulsion for obtaining that redress which was denied to friendly representation, they endeavored to take their revenge by pouring forth any sort of calumny upon the agent who was the instrument of the Government. All he could say was that such a proceeding never would in any degree damage a British representative in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. BRAMLEY MOORE having moved the adjournment of the House, expressed his surprise at the statement of the noble lord that Mr. CHRISTIE had conducted matters in Rio Janeiro with such great moderation. British merchants on the spot, who were the competent and capable of judging of his actions, were of opinion that Mr. CHRISTIE's conduct in reference to the Brazilian Government had been anything but moderate and conciliatory.

Lord PALMERSTON denied that all the respectable merchants of Rio Janeiro disapproved of Mr. CHRISTIE's proceedings.

Mr. BRAMLEY MOORE—The large majority did; a petition to that effect was signed by forty against eighteen.

Lord PALMERSTON contended that it was not for a body of merchants in a foreign country to judge of the expediency of the orders transmitted from the Government at home, and executed by their agents. At the same time, he believed that the opinion of the British merchants was in favor of the course taken by Government, although they were disinclined to answer it, in consequence of the position they occupied in Brazil. With regard to the transaction which led to the dispute with the Brazilian Government, he had very little doubt that the crew of the Prince of Wales were barbarously and inhumanly murdered, although it was very difficult to obtain direct evidence to establish that fact.

Mr. NEWDEGATE and Mr. BOUVERIE defended Mr. CHRISTIE from the insinuation of Gen. WEAD.

Mr. HOWARD had known Mr. CHRISTIE for a long time, and was satisfied that the statement to which Gen. WEAD were without the shadow of foundation.

Mr. DISRAELI deprecated the interruption to the public business which these desultory discussions occasioned. He confessed that he looked with alarm at the wide field for future explanations which the reply of Lord PALMERSTON to Mr. MONCKTON MILNES' question opened out. First the noble lord attacked the Brazilian Government, then the Brazilian nation, next the American Minister at the Brazilian Court, and finally the British merchants carrying on their trade at Rio Janeiro. (Laughter.) No doubt all these persons, even Gen. WEAD, had friends and acquaintances in the House of Commons, who could avail themselves of the opportunity of moving the adjournment of the House, in order that they might vindicate their conduct and require some explanation from the Government.

Mr. BRAMLEY MOORE withdrew his motion, and the subject dropped.

The Seizure of the Alexandra.

MR. DUDLEY RETAINED BY A POLICE MAGISTRATE.

From the Liverpool Post, April 6.

The following occurs in our report yesterday of the Council proceedings of Thursday:

"The report of the Watch, Lighting, Fire Police, Fire Prevention, Hackney-carriage, Licensing, and Gas Committees, were read. A correspondence has taken place between the Town Clerk and Messrs. BUNSANE, SQUEASY & BLAGGARD, on behalf of the American Consul, who desired to know whether it was true that the Watch had dismissed and been furnished with the evidence collected by a Liverpool detective Police-officer, employed by the Mayor at the request of the Home Secretary. The Town Clerk replied that he declined to answer the question, and, if the Watch Committee were not amenable in respect of their acts to the United States Consul. (Loud cries of "Hear, hear," and laughter.)

Mr. OLIVE said, as to the general proceedings, they contained nothing particular, except an allusion to the case of the Alexandra. The Town Clerk replied to the letter of the Solicitors to the United States Consul, and the Committee indorsed fully that reply. (Hear, hear.)

The above refers to a subject which will, in all likelihood, have to be further considered. We are particularly anxious that the facts of the case above referred to should be made public, in order that the high character of the town should not be impeached, and that parties against whom derisive charges are now freely made at Change should have an opportunity of vindicating themselves. These charges affect the Watch Committee, Mr. CLEMS, the Chairman of the Committee, and Maj. GAMBLE, the Head Constable.

Previous to the seizure of the Alexandra, the Solicitor to the Customs was sent here by Sir GEORGE GRAY. He employed a detective for the purpose of making inquiries, and the detective reported to him the result of his inquiries. Whatever was communicated was, of course, kept secret. The owners of the Alexandra, as we stated some time or ten days ago, applied to Sir GEORGE GRAY for the evidence on which the seizure of their vessel was made. Sir GEORGE declined to give it. Immediately after his refusal, however, the detective called, in obedience to instructions from Major GAMBLE, upon Mr. DUDLEY, the United States Consul, to obtain evidence which the Consul had transmitted to Mr. ADAMS, and forwarded by Mr. ADAMS to Earl RUSSELL. The Consul may have regarded the message as somewhat discourteous, if not extraordinary; but as he had, we are told, nothing to conceal, he detailed the evidence confidentially to the officer. The detective obviously knew not only his duty, but his business. He was not going to commit himself to a statement which subsequently might be impugned or contradicted. He, therefore, pulled out his book, and, in the presence of the Consul, wrote down elaborately in detail all that had been told him. Mr. DUDLEY said his report was quite correct, but that he understood it was given confidentially, and not to be repeated. In the course of the afternoon, however, the detective returned. He had come to sustain his good faith by explaining that the secrecy which he promised, he was unable to keep. According to his account, which may be true or otherwise—but it looks like truth—he was sent for at the Watch-office, but at another place, by Maj. GAMBLE, Mr. CLEMS and Mr. Alderman WOOSNAM. They inquired as to the result of his visit to the United States Consular Office; and in reply he told them that he had got the information which he went to seek, but that he had got it in strict confidence, and did not feel disposed to disclose it except to his superior officer. The Major refused to recognize his power of reservation, and demanded the book. The book was given to the Major, who handed it to Mr. CLEMS, and Mr. CLEMS, after reading the contents, observing, on closing the book, that he would communicate the information to Mr. GRAVES.

We can hardly credit this statement, and yet it comes to us in a form so substantially avouched that we feel ourselves bound, in reference to its public importance, to give it publicity. If there is truth, or anything like truth, in it, the Watch Committee and the Head Constable will stand convicted of a very serious mistake, not to use a harsher term. When Government communicated with the Mayor touching the Alexandra, his Worship naturally and properly consulted with the Town-clerk; but we can hardly believe that Mr. SQUEASY, who always acts within the law, and who is always as judicious as he is learned, did, as alleged, communicate with the Watch Committee. The proper person was Major GAMBLE, for the Watch Committee ought to have had nothing whatever to do with the business. Knowing this, Major GAMBLE was not in a condition to communicate directly or indirectly with the Watch Committee or Mr. CLEMS, the Chairman. Obviously the head constable had nothing to do with the information upon which the Alexandra was seized. When his officer reported the result of his inquiries to the Solicitor to the Customs the business was done, and secrecy was strictly to be observed. The Major, if the statement be true, had no business whatever to pry into the evidence in the possession of Mr. DUDLEY; and, above all, he had no right to send a Detective for the purpose of interrogating the American Consul. Mr. CLEMS may or may not be a member of the Southern Club. He has a perfect right to enter the Club, to give all his sympathy to the Confederate cause; but he has evidently done wrong if he has used the influence his office gives him to obtain information to which he was not entitled, through the head constable or through the police. For the moment, it signifies very little whether disclosures respecting the evidence were made or not. In our opinion, the owners of the Alexandra were fairly entitled to the depositions on which the Government was acting. This seems to have been Mr. DUDLEY's opinion, or otherwise, we presume, he would not have conversed so freely with the detective. Having communicated with the officer, and, in return, having communicated important facts to him, he, as a matter of prudence, as well as of duty, consulted the law advisers to his office. It was in consequence of that consultation that the correspondence alluded to in the Council on Wednesday took place.

Although the information does not come to us in a questionable shape, it will be painful to know that for the first time in Liverpool the administration of justice has been exposed to reproach. In common with everybody else, we shall rejoice to find that the honor of the Chairman of the Watch Committee, the Head Constable, and Mr. Alderman WOOSNAM, has not been in the grammatical degree damaged; and they have stood so clear in their high offices, that we feel certain they will thank us for enabling them, thus promptly, to refute statements so injurious yet so confidently made.

SEARCH OF THE CLAIM.

The Shipping Gazette says the case of the seizure of the Alexandra will be tried in the Court of Exchequer, Westminster, before a special jury. The builders and owners of the vessel are urging an early trial. It is believed the Law Officers of the Crown will advise an application being made to the Court next week to appoint a special sitting to try the cause, either at the close of the present Term or in the early part of the next.

Blockade Running.

THE CLYDE DREAMERS, AND WHAT THEY HAVE DONE.

From the Glasgow Journal.

The extent of the transactions in the sale of steamers at the Clyde, during the last year and a half, for the purpose of running the beleaguering blockade, is, perhaps, unknown to many of our readers. The first steamer sold here was the screw steamer Florie. She plied in the West Highland trade, which left this inward the end of 1861, with a cargo of Enfield rifles and ammunition. It was followed by the Leonora, a paddle-steamer, on the Belfast station, and others, of which the following are among the list:

Of well-known river steamers, there were the

Kilda (Arran)	Lost.	Ruby (Rothesay)	Running.
Ben Ardrishaig	Lost.	Neptune (Rath'an)	Running.
Cart (Rothesay)	Captured.	Dolphin	Captured.
Argyle (Rothesay)	Running.	Orphan Girl	Captured.

Of deep-sea steamers there were the

Flingal (sch)	West Highland trade	Now an iron-clad.
Adelaide (ss)	Belfast trade	Captured.
Adelaide (sch)	Antwerp and Bordeaux trade	Captured.
Ariadne (ss)	London trade	Captured.
Talisman (sch)	Londonderry trade	Running.
Leonora (ss)	Liverpool trade	Burned.
Harold (ss)	Dublin trade	Running.
Hawarden (ss)	Belfast trade	Running.
Princess Royal (ss)	Liverpool trade	Captured.
Olinda (ss)	Belfast trade	Running.

Of grave steamers said yards building there were six.

Greenock		Greenock
Greenock	Captured.	Greenock	Run ashore.
Greenock	Run ashore.	Greenock	Captured.
Greenock		Greenock	Captured.
London	Captured.	Paisley	Other way out.
Kingston (Clyde)	Captured.

Of vessels purchased but not away, and sold to be for the South, there are Lord Clyde, (ps), Dublin station; Mail, Kilmun station; Juno, Large station; Jupiter, Large station; Venus, Large station; Cardiff Castle, Rothesay station; Eagle, now building; Victory, now building; a large paddle-steamer now building; a screw-steamer fitting up.

From the above it will be seen that thirty-eight vessels have been bought here, but this does not include the whole, as many left the Clyde professedly for other ports, and on getting clear out changed their names, while several new steamers left without any name, and proceeded to London and Liverpool for cargoes. Although many of those mentioned have been captured, still most of them have more than doubly cleared themselves and cargoes; the Leopard, in particular, or Stonewall Jackson as she was named, which has made many runs, is said to have cleared for her owners nearly 300 per cent; even the Granite City, which only made one successful run, is said to have doubled herself and cargo in that single trip, and the builders and parties for whom she was built are said to have cleared £3,000 each by her sale. Of the steamers sold lately here, so urgent has been the demand, it is said one large steamer cleared to her owners a profit of £16,000 more than her original cost, and a new river paddle-steamer is said to have brought over £8,000 more than her contract price; and another, two years old, to have brought £2,500 more than the original cost. These wholesale dealings, with no regard to costs, are the consequence of the famine prices being paid for clothing, food, and luxuries within the range of the Confederate States. To such an extent do prices range for ordinary food, it is said, that one vessel's whole run lately with tea, coffee, hams, clothing, &c., realized £18,000, and her cargo valued at Charleston, according to the current prices, at £50,000, thus realizing an enormous profit to the speculators.—Glasgow Morning Journal.

SUNK SALES.

From the Glasgow Herald, May 9.

We learn that another batch of our swift river steamers have been purchased during the past week on account of the Confederate Government. We believe the steamer Mail, plying on the Kilmun station, will shortly be withdrawn, having been sold for £7,000. The favorite steamer Jupiter, so long known on the Large, Millport and Arran routes, has also been purchased for something like £9,000. We have also been informed that the steamer Eagle, which was being built for our coasting trade, has been purchased for the Confederate Government for £8,400. The Largs steamer Viola is reported to have been purchased by parties in Glasgow for our river traffic. Other vessels, now being built in several of our shipyards, are reported as being pushed rapidly forward to meet the growing wants of the South.

THE PET.

From the Liverpool Journal of Commerce.

This fine little steamer, that left this port on the 16th of January, has successfully run the blockade of Wilmington, N. C., arriving there on the 16th ult. She left Nassau in company with the steamer Flora, keeping company during the voyage, and running the blockade together. The Flora is the screw-steamer with double screws, whose trial trips on the Thames, some months ago, were so much spoken of by scientific men. She has been very successful so far in running the blockade—principally at Charleston, the present being, we believe, the second time she made to Wilmington. This is the first time the Pet has succeeded in running the blockade—Wilmington being tried after an unsuccessful attempt to enter Charleston. She is a screw-steamer, of 171 tons, steams very fast, having been built expressly for blockade running purposes. She is under the command of Capt. Davis. Some misunderstanding was created by her arrival, having been reported as the Pell—later accounts, however, brought the correction.

THE ADELA.

From the Liverpool Journal of Commerce.

"The newspaper Press of this country is unanimous in their decision that this steamer is an illegal prize, and as such ought to be given up at once to the owners. We were informed, yesterday, on the best authority, that this fine steamer is now being fitted up as a gunboat by the Federals. If the Government of the United States have determined to have this vessel as a gunboat by illegal means, it is, in our opinion, high time that Her Majesty's Government should interfere, as no amount of compensation can justify such an outrageous proceeding. It appears that the United States Government, seeing that they cannot build fast sailing steamers, also determined to unprovoked by their own, and seize such as they may capture, without the slightest regard to nationality, so as to enable them to commit further depredations upon our commerce, and seize other steamers engaged in a legitimate trade.

The Times Correspondent in the South.

Under date of Richmond, March 23, the Southern correspondent of the Times writes an exceedingly interesting letter. He says:

"At this moment the Confederate States, no less or scarcely less than the Federal, are floating swiftly along a current which, if this was be protracted for ten months more, will plunge both sections alike into that great ocean of reprobation which is unanimously and without a shudder condemned throughout Europe, but toward which there is at least great repugnance professed at Richmond. In both sections alike the result is that everything resembling property is eagerly bought up as a safe vehicle for the conveyance of a fraction of those promises to pay with which every man, ragged and tattered though in some instances he may be, is heavily freighted. At the slave-market in Richmond not a day passes but negroes and negresses are eagerly bought at prices varying from $1,000 to $3,500; and if an English eye could ever learn to look with indifference upon so sad a sight, many a smile might be provoked to see the proud satisfaction with which a negro, who in ordinary times would have fetched $1,300, and who has little conception of the meaning of such recondite terms as depreciation of the currency, &c. &c. himself knocked down at an advance upon that figure of $1,000. 'I told you,' said a female slave-trader, in my hearing, in the dimensions of her crinoline, and pointing proudly to her man-virtuous, 'that it won't for nothing that I were them things;' her meaning being that the large price of $2,300 which she had just fetched was attributable to her injoiteris."

With regard to the prospects of the war, the writer says:

"If the eye is lifted from the opposing hosts at Fredericksburgh, and carried westward along the line of the Confederate defence—a line that stretches thousands of miles over mountain, river, lake, swamp, bayou, forest, prairie and heath, till, starting from the pine woods of the Rappahannock, it lands us among the palms and magnolias of Galveston, there is no point where a firmer attitude of defence, a more solid state of preparation, is not worn and evinced by the Confederate hosts of 1863 than was ever by them exhibited since the first drum beat to arms. Still, there is a carelessness and carnestness, a levity and a gravity, in the tone of the preparations for the bloodiest campaign of the bloodiest war of modern history, which is generally noticeable, and which I have never before observed. Let no one suppose that they betoken want of confidence. The subjugation of the South was never a probability; it has been manifested by twenty-three months of bitterest strife to be the wildest of chimeras. But it is felt when, in spite of the hecatombs of dead who have fallen, there is a cry for rivers of fresh blood—when throughout the length and breadth of the land there is scarcely a house where there is not one dead—when valuable lives which never can be replaced have fallen in every profession, city and State—when not only men like Major STRAHAN, and other noted men, learned and studious, such as Prof. COLEMAN, (the Dr. ARNOLD, as he was reputed, of this continent,) have yielded up their lives by hundreds—it is felt that this is no moment for thoughtlessness and levity. Another thought is continually finding expression—it is that the two sections do not fight on level ground. The North is feeding her armies with recruits who are three-fourths of them foreigners, many of them taken from the emigrant ships at Castle Garden; the South is sending into the field the very life-blood of her best youth. It may be that the civilized Powers of Europe, considering that they do upon a higher level than it is possible that I can occupy, may see no locus of successful moral interference. But if they could only witness the misery which is, from every core of this once-favored sentiment, ascending alone to Heaven, it could scarcely be but that they would feel some chance of failure rather than permit humanity to be outraged by a continuance of such excess of anguish as has visited no nation since the sword first leaped from its scabbard, and the human heart was first sown with the bitter seed of vindictiveness and hate."

For the New-Orleans Trade.

From the Northern (Glasgow) Daily Express.

On the 21st of March the large screw-steamer, the Georgia, was successfully launched from the Jarrow shipbuilding yard of Messrs. PEARSE BROTHERS. The vessel is of about 2,000 tons burden, and is the property of Messrs. PEARSE BROTHERS, of Liverpool. She is intended to trade between that port and New-Orleans for cotton. She is 345 feet long, 41 feet beam, and 30 feet depth of hold. She is capable of stowing 3,000 bales of cotton, and she has accommodation besides for 70 saloon passengers and 200 second-class passengers. The Georgia is the first of three vessels of the same size, ownership and destination; but Messrs. PEARSE are engaged to construct for Messrs. PEARSE seven more of a larger size, being 20 feet larger than the Georgia, and of 2,500 tons. The Georgia has, we understand, been tried under steam at sea, and fully answered the high expectations of her builders and owners. Her engines gave out their full power of 1,000 horses, and worked splendidly, giving out 54 revolutions with steam at 30 pounds pressure and a gauge vacuum in condenser of 26 inches. A mean of six runs at the measured mile gave a speed of 16.6 knots to the ship. Under this trial there was a remarkable absence of vibration in every part of the hull, not the least being perceptible even when her large two-bladed propeller was at its greatest velocity, thus evincing great strength from the careful distribution of longitudinal girders and stringers with the light sounding of plating adopted in her construction by Mr. JOHNSON. Her draught, during trial, was 16 feet 6 inches aft, and 14 feet 6 inches forward, with 1,100 tons on board.

Emigration.

From the Kerry Evening Post.

The stream of emigration is increasing rather than diminishing from all parts of this county. There were four departures from Tralee this week, one by steamer to Liverpool, and three by train to Cork, all en route to America—that on Wednesday morning to Cork, to meet the Inman steamer, consisted of nearly three hundred persons, picked up at the Tralee, Farranfore, Killarney and Mallow stations. The majority consist of young persons of both sexes from the country districts.

Food for the Rebels.

The following paragraph in the London Star of May 8 confirms some statements which have already been made here:

"The steamer Gladiator, which sailed from Liverpool last week, took on board 1,500 barrels of bread and 1,000 casks of bacon. The Gladiator cleared for Nassau, but there is but little doubt that her cargo is destined for a Confederate port."

The Atlantic Telegraph.

Messrs. GLASS, ELLIOT & Co., of London, the large and wealthy manufacturers of submarine telegraph cables, have subscribed £100,000 sterling to the new guaranteed stock of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, in addition to the £30,000 subscribed by them last October, making their cash subscription £265,000 sterling, or in American currency at the present rate of exchange between London and New-York, $1,300,000.

They offer to manufacture and lay down a good and durable sub-marine cable between Ireland and Newfoundland, on condition that they are paid each week their actual disbursements for labor and materials, and that when the cable is laid and in good working order, they shall receive for their time, services, wear and tear of machinery, interest on capital and profit, twenty per cent on the actual cost of the line, in shares of the company deliverable to them in monthly instalments, during a period of twelve months; provided the cable at the end of each successive month shall be found in perfect working order.

This great international work will now be pushed forward, without delay, and completed during the summer of 1864.

The Paris moniteur publishes the following notification: "An international conference has just been opened in Paris, at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, for the purpose of examining a project for a telegraphic line intended to connect Europe with the American continent. It is proposed that the submarine portion shall work from Porto Grande, Cape Verd Islands to Brazil, and to continue thence by the West India Islands to North America. The powers most immediately interested in the success of this undertaking have promptly given in their adhesion to the views of the Emperor's Government."

The Opinion Nationale has the subjoined observations on the proposed project of laying down an electric cable from France to America, as announced in the official journal:

"The realization of this undertaking is one of the greatest desiderata of civilization; we therefore heartily congratulate the French Government on having taken the initiative, and the Governments of Spain, Brazil, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, and the Republic of Hayti, as having eagerly adhered to a project of so much importance. The success of a transatlantic cable is unhappily still doubtful. Science is from despairing of the future; but however disposed it may be to applaud all attempts of the kind, it can hardly venture to give them Halid encouragement after the disasters which attended the submersion of the first cables of great length. It is urgent, say, even indispensable, to place Europe in instantaneous communication with the New World; and without the least wish to turn aside the Governments from the scheme of establishing a direct communication across the depths of the ocean, we cannot too earnestly recommend to their attention the exceptional facilities and advantages of the telegraphic line projected between Europe and America, by Madras, Bombay, Calcutta, Singapore, Cochin-China, Canton, Pekin, and the Aleutian Islands with a branch line to Japan. The transatlantic cable will only connect the extreme points. The telegraph through Asia will serve at the same time the most populous and the most productive countries of the world."

An Un-Diplomatic Snarl.

PERSONAL DIFFICULTY BETWEEN MR. CHRISTIE AND GEN. WEAD AT RIO JANEIRO.

To the Editor of the London Times:

SIR: I have received Earl RUSSELL's permission to publish the following statement.

It refers to letters of Gen. WEAD, the Minister of the United States at Rio, which have been published and commented on to my prejudice in newspapers all over the world, but by which your columns have never been sullied. I regret to say that other English newspapers, reputed respectable, and organs of parties, have not shown your good taste and prudence.

I placed myself at the beginning in Earl RUSSELL's hands with reference to Gen. WEAD's proceedings, and felt it my duty to abstain from all public action or explanation. I have thus maintained silence during four months in Rio Janeiro, supported, however, by the sympathy and good opinion of all respectable men there, of all nations, touching Gen. WEAD's conspiracy. Having received Earl RUSSELL's permission, I ask you to publish the subjoined statement. In your columns it will be read everywhere where other papers have circulated. I do not intend to notice anything more said by Gen. WEAD, or said on his authority, and I quit, I hope forever, an ignoble subject. I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient humble servant,
W. D. CHRISTIE, Her Majesty's Envoy-Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Brazil.

HILLMORSON, Uxbridge, May 2.

STATEMENT.

Gen. WEAD, the American Minister at Rio, adopting an unusual and extraordinary course, addressed, in November last, a letter to Earl RUSSELL, giving an account of a personal difference with me and making accusations against me. He followed up this proceeding by another, more extraordinary. He circulated, in manuscript, a letter addressed to Lord RUSSELL, with a variety of enclosures, as widely as he could in Brazil, and he has caused this correspondence to be printed in the United States and in England. It has appeared in Galignani's Messenger and in some English newspapers, and has been referred to in others; and it has been printed in the Brazilian newspapers. A very offensive passage of Gen. WEAD's letter was quoted in the House of Commons by Mr. SCARLEY MOORE.

Up to the time of my departure from Rio, in March, I abstained from publishing or circulating any statement in reply; but on my arrival in England I have consulted some of my friends, and their advice leads me to relinquish silence.

I confine myself to two or three leading points in Gen. WEAD's accusations, believing that my answers on these points, aided by Gen. WEAD's own style and statements, will suffice for all.

1. Gen. WEAD, in a letter to me of the 6th of November, which I subjoin, being printed, gives the following account of the beginning of our difference. "At M. GLINKA's, the Russian Minister's, on Thursday evening, October 30, in presence of the Russian and Prussian Ministers, the Russian Secretary of Legation, and at least one lady, you used toward me language far more fitting an English groom than an English Minister. I promptly declared it impertinence, said it was my custom to punish impertinence—a bad custom, perhaps, but a habit upon which I had always acted, and by the God that made me, if you ever again were impertinent to me, I should punish you." Gen. WEAD does not say what were those words or mine which he describes as "language far more fitting an English groom than an English Minister;" but he gives in detail his reply, his account of which, I regret to say, is not exaggerated. Now, my words were, in answer to a censure by Gen. WEAD of my play at whist, he being my partner, "You talked so much, General, as to put me out." I appealed to the Russian and Prussian Ministers MM. DE GLINKA and D'EICHMANN, and I subjoin their testimonies. Their statements as to what I said are very clear and satisfactory. My words, as certified by the Russian and Prussian Ministers, are not, I think, unbecoming to an English Minister, and I cannot see that they are peculiarly appropriate to an English groom. I believe that no one who knows me would think me likely to talk like a groom, and had I done so in M. DE GLINKA's house, in the presence of Ministers, Secretaries, and before "at least one lady," I think that honor and colleagues would have been justly displeased. The Prussian Minister, M. D'EICHMANN, had then lately arrived in Rio, for the first time; my relations with him, which have been from the first agreeable, have since ripened into friendship. It is a matter of little importance, but, according to my recollection, no lady was present, indeed we sat beneath the beer whist players.

2. Gen. WEAD says in the same letter that he was told that I had agreed to challenge him, and that a meeting, with pistols, had been arranged, and that the matter were immediately arranged, and that he replied that he was ready to give me a meeting at sunrise, &c. I not only did not agree to giving a challenge, but I stated to M. DE GLINKA at the outset, in M. D'EICHMANN's presence, if not in his hearing, that I was not a duellist, and that with me there was no question of fighting. M. DE GLINKA misunderstood me at first, and thought I had said or meant "I am no duelist, but I will fight this time." However, I corrected M. DE GLINKA's mistake both to him and to M. D'EICHMANN within a few minutes, and I am quite unable to conceive, according to my ordinary modes of interpreting the context of the gentlemen, how Gen. WEAD should a week after have written this romance about a challenge, and then published it. Nothing was ever said to me about getting up at sunrise. I have always been an opponent of dueling; more than 20 years ago I printed an essay against it; I have spoken against it in the House of Commons, and was a member of an Anti-Dueling Society which contributed something to the change of opinion in England about duels.

3. I subjoin an extract of a letter from me to Earl RUSSELL, calling special attention to Gen. WEAD's offensive imputations against my character. Lord RUSSELL has hitherto not thought Gen. WEAD's letters worthy of notice, and he is probably right. They who know Gen. WEAD and do not know me, will estimate them according to their estimation of him whom they know. They who know neither the one nor the other, will probably think such accusations against a British Minister monstrous and incredible, even though they proceed from one who bears the title of General. (Gen. WEAD is a General of Militia, and was for a long period editor of a New-York newspaper, until he was appointed in 1861 Minister in Brazil.) W. D. CHRISTIE.

MAY 1.

Italian Affairs.

A lengthy debate took place on the affairs of Italy, in the course of which the policy of the Italian Government was severely criticised by several speakers, while others, including Lord PALMERSTON, contended that the Government was not blameable for all the charges brought against it.

England and Brazil.

The Morning Star says it is certain the Brazilian Minister at London had been instructed to demand explanations from the British Government, and that upon the nature of the answers and assurances given will probably depend the continuance of friendly diplomatic relations.

THE POLISH REVOLUTION.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times has heard corroborations of the report that while every effort will be made to induce England and Austria to act in concert with France on the Polish question, the Emperor NAPOLEON will still pursue his object alone if obliged to do so. The Poles seem to feel as sanguine in their expectations of aid from France as the Piedmontese did before the Emperor entered on the Italian war. This confidence must be founded on something more solid than vague hope.

The question has been put from Paris to the Secret Committee which concerns Polish affairs, whether the insurgents are in a position to maintain themselves for two months more, and the reply has been in the affirmative. It is reported that a manifesto will be issued by that mysterious body which still eludes the grasp of the Russian Police, and organizes its bands from Warsaw, announcing that a loan, to a very large amount, secured on the property of the revolutionist Poles, is about to be raised, for the purpose of carrying on the war. The King of Sweden is heart and soul with the Poles, and the nation, apparently, goes with the King. Much of this feeling is, no doubt, owing to the hope of recovering Finland.

The Paris Pays urges the necessity for a speedy conference on the Polish question.

On the 6th instant Immermann gained a brilliant victory over the Russians near Ostrowo, in the province of Lublin. The Poles had 43 killed and 50 wounded. The Russians had 300 killed; the number of their wounded is not known. The fight lasted three hours. The Russians finally retreated, and the insurgents maintained all their positions.

Mr. RUSSIZ, the well-known correspondent of the London Times, had arrived at Lemberg, to write for the Times on Polish affairs.

On the 7th, the insurgents were defeated and dispersed near Sejny and Wolkowisk. A number of them fought their way into the Russian, and 140 others had been conveyed to Cracow.

On the 8th inst., Mierosiewicz suffered a defeat, with considerable loss, at Kraskawka. Gen. NIEBLA was killed.

Six hundred insurgents, who had come from Galicia, had been defeated near Slowko. Thirty of their number were taken prisoners, among whom were fourteen Frenchmen and Italians.

On the 5th inst., the Insurgent Chief ROMITSA, with 600 men, defeated the Russian infantry near Milnyrzecz, but was defeated and taken prisoner.

The Swiss Federal Council has declared it impossible to take into consideration the English note inviting it to support at St. Petersburg the steps taken by England in favor of Poland.

The French Minister of Marine had sent orders to the different French ports on the Atlantic for the reception of a Swedish fleet expected next month. A Russian fleet was getting ready to cruise in the Baltic, and the French and English marine ports is carried on with great activity.

The Polish Question in Parliament.

In the House of Lords, on the 8th, the Earl of Shaftesbury brought the subject of Poland before the House of Lords, making a very strong pro-Polish speech. He denounced Prussia very fiercely, and exposed the real character of the Russian rule of Poland. After denouncing as evasive and treacherous the fair-sounding professions of the Emperor's Government in the recent diplomatic correspondence, and insisting that his intentions must be judged of by his acts and the menaces of his Generals, he asserted that the only cure for the evils which existed was the separation of Poland from Russia, to which, as well as to the other European Powers, she was a source of weakness and peril.

Lord HARDWICKE used equally strong language, but disrecommended war.

Earl RUSSELL expressed great confidence in the humane intentions of the Czar, but he could not see how after years of oppression and perfidy the Poles were to exhibit that confidence in his Majesty's policy without which, according to Prince GORTSCHAKOFF, it was impossible to hope for a fair trial of the promised concessions. The question of separation was surrounded with great difficulties and involved the possibility of a long and costly war, into which her Majesty's Government would be loth to enter without the most pressing necessity. Her Majesty's Government had advised the Emperor to restore the Constitutions granted by ALEXANDER I., to give the Poles a free Parliament, and to place the judicial, civic, and political administration of the country in the hands of men whom the people could trust. He hoped the minor States would back up the representations of the Great Powers on this question, and he could not but believe that the ultimately public opinion thus forcibly expressed would tell even upon the conduct of the Autocrat of all the Russias.

FRANCE.

The elections are positively fixed for the 31st of May and 1st of June.

It is announced that English ships taking refuge in French ports are no longer to be charged with a duty of one franc per ton, if on their passage from one port to another they do not engage in any trade during their stay.

VERY LATEST INTELLIGENCE PER THE CHINA.

[By Telegraph to Queenstown.]

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, May 9—Evening.

The Arabia's news to day imparted a cheerful feeling to the Federals in Liverpool, and encouraging deductions were drawn from the progress of Gen. BANKS.

The loss of the Anglo-Saxon created a painful sensation.

LONDON, Saturday, May 9.

There is no political news of importance.

The Berlin Cabinet held a Council yesterday to consider the exodus from Posen of large numbers of young men to join the Polish insurgents. It is reported that the Ministers are determined, for the present, not to declare Posen in a state of siege, nor to close the session of Parliament.

FRIDAY, May 22—P. M.

The price of Gold Coin, which was put up late on Friday to 150 ⅌ cent., on unfavorable rumors, since contradicted, from GRANT's Army, near Vicksburgh, relapsed this Afternoon to 148½ ⅌ cent., and Exchange on London for Saturday's mail left off about 164 ⅌ cent. There was a fair degree of activity in the Money Market, at 6 ⅌ 7 ⅌ cent. to the Stock Brokers, to-day, but less employment and more facilities for borrowing than earlier in the week. Most of the old-established Stock firms report an easy supply, at 6 ⅌ cent. The subscriptions paid into the Treasury for the New Loan of 1862 are on the increase. The sum total to-day is $3,080,000, of which $1,-250,000 was paid in by the Loan Agents, and the remainder on subscriptions made directly to the Treasury.

The speculation on the Stock Exchange continues active, with a large volume of business in the Railway Shares. The fluctuations, pro and con, to-day have been frequent, and as much as 2 @3 ⅌ cent. from one hour to another on many of the leading speculatives. The temper of the general market was decidedly firm, at the early Board, (though previously lower on the Street,) and soon after the adjournment the sales further advanced and were higher at 1 o'clock than on the printed sales. At the Second Board the turn in prices were in the opposite direction again, and before the Brokers left their room a difference of 2½ ⅌ cent. had been made against Erie, and of 1 @2 ⅌ cent. on several of the Western descriptions. Harlem Shares were firm and in demand throughout the day, and there was but little disposition to sell Hudson River. The Railway Bonds were steady and on Mississippi and Missouri Land Grants and Northwest Seconds the bidding was higher; though not yet up to Monday or Tuesday's rates.

At 4 o'clock the Share market improved over the lowest previous sales, and left off about as follows, as compared with the figures of last night, with less excitement on the Street:

The English news by the China this morning is not important in its financial aspect. The political feeling in regard to this country had further improved, and no apprehension of serious difficulty is now felt in London, say the private letters, unless courted from this side. The Bank of England's weekly return shows a reduction of £207,000 in Specie. Money quoted 3 ⅌ cent. In American Stocks there was more doing in United States 5 ⅌ cents of 1874, which are quoted 2 ⅌ cent. higher, and in Illinois Central shares at an improvement 1@2 ⅌ cent. Mr. SAUTERWAITE, the Broker in American securities, writes that Illinois Central attracts increased favor in view of the possibility of the early reopening of the free navigation of the Mississippi.

Messrs. MULLER, WILKINS & CO. will hold their regular auction sale of stocks and bonds to-morrow, Saturday, at 12½ o'clock, at the Merchant's Exchange Salesroom, No. 103 Liberty-street, by order of C. T. BUCKLEY, Administrator.

Frank Leslie's Illustrated News of the present week contains a commendatory notice and description of the Merchants' Exchange News Rooms, No. 50 and 52 Pine-street, with two exact and beautiful views of the exterior of the building, and the convenient and complete arrangement of the interior of the rooms. It affords us pleasure to add our own testimony to the growing popularity and usefulness of this establishment.

We call attention to the notice of consolidation of the two sections of Railway between Chicago and Milwaukee, which must be completed at the office of the Consolidated Company, No. 52 Wall-street, to-morrow, Saturday, May 23. Stockholders in either of the old Companies are especially interested in this notice, if they have not already assented to the terms of the new arrangement.

Mr. WILLIAM ALBERT JENKINS, at present with Messrs. FITZHUGH & JENKINS, was yesterday admitted a member of the Stock Exchange Board.

The terms of the consolidation of traffic on the Roads from Buffalo to Toledo and from Cleveland to Columbus, agreed upon on the 9th inst. by the Convention of Directors, are substantially as follows—subject, of course, to the approval of the Stockholders of each Company.

ARTICLE 1. That the earnings of the Roads owned by the parties hereto, which shall consist of earnings and income derived from the transportation of persons and property, mails and express, rents at tracks, (where the rents are received, instead of cash for the Company's proportion of fares and freight,) and also all other income derived, by rent or otherwise, from the use, by railroads or others, of depots or tracks; but not including rents, all real estate, and income so received or obtained by either of the parties for depot or track purposes, shall be aggregated and divided between the parties, in manner to be provided in Article 3.

ART. 2. From the earnings derived by each party hereto from the sources mentioned in Article 1, fifty (50) per cent. thereof shall be retained for running expenses, &c., by each party, on the amount earned by them respectively, and the balance of said gross earnings shall be aggregated and divided between them in the following proportions, to wit: The said first party—Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati—shall receive twenty-eight (28) ⅌ cent. thereof; the said second party—Cleveland and Toledo—shall receive twenty-one and one-half (21½) ⅌ cent. thereof; the said third party—Cleveland, Painesville and Ashtabula—shall receive twenty-six and ninety-three hundredths (26 93-100) ⅌ cent. thereof; and the said fourth party—Buffalo and State Line—shall receive twenty-three and fifty-seven hundredths (23 57-100) ⅌ cent. thereof.

The Circular of Mr. HURST, President of the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad Company, to his shareholders, on this subject, remarks:

"The objects to be obtained by this arrangement are the stifling of jealousies and competition, and the saving the expenditure of money growing out of such jealousies and competition; the more equal distribution of cars; the more perfect connection of trains and trains, and the more equal distribution of the expense thereof; and the mutual protection that would be afforded by the united companies to each separate company, against formidable competing roads constructed, and being constructed. United, these Companies would have a strength, it is hoped, to successfully meet any competition that might be brought against them; while either Company, singly, might not be so fortunate. Under this arrangement neither Company parts with any of its corporate rights, or the advantages of separate management."

The Imports of Foreign Dry Goods, at the port of New-York, week ending May 21, were $534,907, against: $470,142 same week last year, and $568,933 the corresponding week of 1861. The following is the summary for the week:

Reviewing the week's business, the Cincinnati Price Current, May 20, says:

"The general character of the week, in a business point of view, has been dullness and depression. The demand for all kinds of produce has been light, and prices are generally lower. The market for flour and grain continues greatly depressed, and a further material decline has been established during the week. East Fall, and up to about the 1st of March, there was a very general disposition displayed to make investments in flour and wheat, and this feeling extended to numerous parties not in the trade at all, but who had money they were desirous to invest, and this impulse continued and reached its climax when gold went up to 170, and flour run up to $6 25, and wheat to a corresponding rate. The result of all this is, that an immense stock of flour and wheat is now held by these speculators in the West, and the former is being pressed on the Eastern markets as a matter of necessity, for it is well known that flour made last Fall or Winter will, as a general thing, sour within a very short time after being removed from store, when the weather becomes warm. While pressing to sell flour, as we remarked last week, is causing prices to decline rapidly, and exerts a marked influence on the market for wheat, and will force prices, no doubt, to a point below the legitimate value. The harvest of 1862 was an abundant one, not only in this country, but also in all the leading agricultural nations of the Old World; and, as a consequence, we had the English and French markets glutted with grain, and prices dropped to an unusual low point. And when the prospects of another most abundant harvest, so far as the season has been developed, are of the most flattering character, so that all appearances, just now, are in favor of a continued great abundance of human food, and a very low scale of prices."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The news from Gen. GRANT this morning, both from our own and from rebel sources of information, is of the highest importance. After the capture of Jackson, his army, being provided with eight days' rations, he ceased communication with Grand Gulf, on account of the large escorts required for that service. From Jackson, it was understood to be his intention to force his way through to Haines' Bluff, on the YAZOO, and secure the enemy's transports. He held the bridge across the Big Black River with five thousand men, and had destroyed several miles of the Vicksburgh and Jackson Railroad near the latter place. Here information from our side ceases. Rebel dispatches state that our forces evacuated Jackson at 2 o'clock on Friday, the 17th, and proceeded toward Vicksburgh. On Saturday, the 18th, there was a heavy battle near Edwards' Station, on the Vicksburgh Railroad, between Gen. GRANT and the rebels from Vicksburgh, under Gen. PEMBERTON, in which the latter were driven back to their intrenchments—one account states with the loss of sixteen pieces of artillery. Baker's Creek is stated as the exact locality of the battle. Gen. JOE JOHNSTON, in an official dispatch to the rebel War Department does not attempt to disguise the fact that Gen. PEMBERTON was defeated. This dispatch is dated at a point between Livingston and Brownsville, which would make his location westward of Jackson—the direction in which he retreated when driven out of that place by Gen. GRANT. JOHNSTON says the battle lasted nine hours, when PEMBERTON was compelled to fall back behind the Big Black. The rebel Gen. TILGHMAN was killed, and the losses are reported to be heavy on both sides.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Matanzas, we receive advices from New-Orleans to the 13th inst. She brings no later news from Gen. BANKS, but we have by her an account of another bombardment of the Port Hudson batteries by Admiral FARRAGUT, in which considerable damage was inflicted upon that rebel stronghold, with no loss on our side. The bombardment commenced at midnight of the 8th, and continued, with intermissions, for two days. The object of the demonstration was probably to prevent rebel reinforcements from marching from Port Hudson to Vicksburgh.

Reports reach us via Cairo from the Red River. Our gunboats have proceeded above Alexandria, and succeeded in breaking the rebel raft. At Harrisonburgh, a battery was shelled two hours, but it had not been captured at last accounts.

A dispatch from Cincinnati confirms our Washington correspondent's statement that VALLANDIGHAM's sentence has been changed by the President into transportation beyond our lines. Gen. ROSECRANS is intrusted with the duty of sending him within BRAGG's lines.

FROM EUROPE.

Advices from Europe two days later are received by the steamship China, which arrived at this port yesterday morning. She left Liverpool on the 9th, and Queenstown on the 10th inst. The news is of very little importance. The New-York correspondent of the London Herald asserts that the passages of the emigrants now arriving in the United States from Ireland are paid by the United States Government—the sum appropriated to the purpose being $3,000,000, which is charged to enlistment expenses. The London Times thinks the capture of Vicksburgh and Port Hudson will prove a very damaging blow to the rebels. The news of the progress of Gen. BANKS in Louisiana, taken out by the Arabia, had created a cheerful feeling in the Federal element in Liverpool. A discussion had taken place in the House of Commons relative to the conduct of the British Minister in Brazil, during which Lord PALMERSTON sustained the course of that individual, and denounced Gen. WEBB, the American Minister. The Polish revolution was proceeding with varying fortune to the revolutionists. There had been no determination of the diplomatic questions growing out of it. The Liverpool cotton market was firm. Breadstuffs and provisions were dull. The latest quotation for Consols was 92¼ for Money.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Supervisors held a special meeting, at 3 o'clock P. M. yesterday, to direct the payment of bills, to the amount of $350, for workmen's wages on the new Court-house, the Mayor having refused to sign a warrant for the necessary funds, because the pay-rolls had been audited only by the Committee of the Board in charge of the construction of the building, holding that the Board have no right to delegate the executive power of passing bills to any committee of that body. Mr. STEWART made a statement of the case, and Mr. TWEED presented the bills, with a resolution ordering them to be paid. The resolution was adopted, and the Board adjourned.

A large audience last evening assembled at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, to hear Miss DICKINSON's address upon "The Way Providence is Teaching the Nation." She commanded the closest attention of her numerous audience, and was warmly applauded.

In the habeas corpus case of JAMES F. HAMILTON, the Georgia spy, it has been arranged between Gen. WOOL and HAMILTON's counsel, that a private examination shall be had of the facts appertaining to his presence here, which will be reported to Judge McCUNN for his action.

The Court of Sessions opened yesterday, but no case being ready for trial, the jury were discharged for the term. The Oyer and Terminer also opened, but no business was transacted.

The speculation in Stocks was again on an active scale yesterday, though the market closed under less excitement late in the afternoon. The price of Gold fell back to 148¼@¾; Exchange on London, 164; Money 6@7 ⅌ cent. The payments into the Treasury on account of subscriptions to the New Loan of the United States of 1862, at par, reached $2,050,000 for the day in this City alone.

Breadstuffs and Provisions were plenty and rather more active yesterday; prices of Flour, Wheat, Corn and Pork, were lower. Groceries were less freely dealt in, as were also Oils, Tallow, Fruit and Cotton. A fair inquiry prevailed for Hay, Cassia, Whisky and Candles. Wool was in more demand at declining prices. Freights were depressed. Government contracts were awarded for 340,000 lbs. Rio Coffee at 31½c. for green, ⅌ lb., and $38 15 for roasted and ground, ⅌ 100 lbs.; also, 300,000 lbs. Rangoon Rice at $3 43¾ ⅌ 100 lbs.

English Suspension of the Habeas Corpus.

It has been, from the outset, the settled aim of the rebel sympathizers and of the anti-war men to weaken, so far as they could, the arm of the Administration. They dared not vindicate the rebellion, and advocate peace with it outright, but what they dared not to do directly, they have constantly done indirectly. Not venturing to justify the rebellion, they have yet never ceased to apologize for it, and extenuate it, by denouncing Abolition as its provocation and cause. Not venturing to oppose the war squarely, they have yet sought to disable the Government from prosecuting it by opposing the conscription act, which alone can supply the men, and the financial measures, which alone could supply the means. Their whole public policy has been, not to plant themselves against the war—for that would have been suicidal—but to cripple those who carried on the war.

This factious, traitorous spirit has been particularly displayed in respect to the suspension of the habeas corpus. When the rebellion first broke out, Congress not being in session, the President, at his own instance, suspended the writ, and thereby, according to the subsequent statement of Gov. HICKS in the United States Senate, prevented at least one State, Maryland, from being carried over to the rebels. Though the legality of his proceeding was sustained by Attorney-General BATES, by Judge BENEDICT, by Reverend JOHNSON, and generally by the best constitutional lawyers of the country, the anti-war men straightway denounced it as a monstrous usurpation—clamoring that Congress alone had a right to suspend the writ. This clamor was kept up until finally Congress, not only passed a bill indemnifying the President for the past suspension, but formally authorizing the suspension of the writ for all time during the present rebellion. But the calculation that this would silence faction failed utterly. There is just as much brawling to-day about the inviolability of habeas corpus as there was before the action of Congress. The Copperhead demagogues habitually rant just as if there was no clause in the Constitution providing for the suspension of writ "in cases of insurrection and invasion."

Now, if this balderdash were confined to such windbags as figured at the Union-square meeting the other evening, it would not be worth noticing. But the editors of public journals, who ought to know better, constantly indulge in the same wretched charlatanry. Their readers are daily told that the suspension of the habeas corpus is a most intolerable piece of tyranny, which no other people making the least pretension to constitutional freedom would endure for a moment. Charity would impute this to ignorance; but, if ignorance, it is of the very grossest description. For the benefit of the people, who talk so much and know so little of Magna Charta, we propose to devote a little space, this morning, to the manner in which England, the native land of Magna Charta, deals with a rebellion. It is possible that some of these men may come to understand that war makes some difference in civil rights—that De Lolme, the commentator on the British Constitution, had some idea of what he was writing about when he said, in reference to the suspension of the habeas corpus, that "in proportion as a government is in danger it becomes necessary to abridge the liberty of the subject"—and that the framers of our own Constitution were not apostates and tyrants when they inserted a specific clause authorizing the suspension of the writ, "when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it."

We shall not stop to make reference to the suspension of habeas corpus in England at the time of the invasions of the Pretender in 1715 and 1745, nor to the various suspensions in Ireland in 1800—from 1802 to 1805—from 1807 to 1810—in 1814—from 1822 to 1824; but we will confine ourselves to the suspension of the act in 1848, under the direction of statesmen still on the stage. We have nothing to say about the right or the wrong of the Irish attempt at rebellion in that year; it is our purpose simply to show how the English Government met it.

The chronic agitation in Ireland began to take a threatening shape directly after the continental revolutions of February and March; but we believe, even in the December previous, Parliament passed an act forbidding the possession of arms in certain troublesome districts. In April, an act was passed called the "Felony bill," making it felony, among other things, "for any person to compass, imagine or intend to depose the Sovereign, or to levy war against her." Under this law, MEAGER, the editor of The Felon, was tried and convicted and sent to Newgate, on account of his writings and public speeches. Other prosecutions of similar character took place. In July, the Whig Ministry, through Lord JOHN RUSSELL, introduced a bill empowering the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and deputies to "apprehend and detain, until 1st of March, 1849, such persons as they shall suspect of conspiring against Her Majesty's person and Government." This was a suspension of the act of habeas corpus for all Ireland—the loyal North as well as the disaffected East and the rebellious South and West. The bill was introduced in the House, and went through all of its stages to its final passage in one day; and on the next day it, in like manner, passed the House of Lords. In both Houses the vote was unanimous. Even the Irish members did not vote against it. Even LUCIUS O'BRIEN, the brother of the rebel leader, gave it his support. The leaders of all the various parties supported it, though party spirit ran very high at that period.

Said Lord BROUGHAM, in the House of Lords:

"A friend of liberty I have lived, and so I shall die,—nor do I care how soon that may be if I cannot be the friend of liberty without being a friend of traitors at the same time, without being the protector of criminals, without being deemed to be the accomplice of foul rebellion and its concomitant civil war, with all of its hideous train of atrocious crimes. It is because I am a friend of liberty that I detest the approach of bloodshed, that I detest the conspiracies which are brewing in the sister isle. The noble Marquis (Marquis of LANSDOWNE) has informed us that the danger is imminent. Then let the measure which invests the Government with needful, and no more than needful, powers, be immediately adopted."

Lord STANLEY, now Earl DERBY, said:

"I think that the Government has asked for the right remedy. I think the remedy for which they have asked is one which will strike the right persons, and strike them within the right time. I am not one of those who would seek for victims among the credulous dupes of the incendiary agitators of Ireland—dupes who will be put forward in the front ranks for the purpose of committing crimes and outrages. I do not desire—God forbid that I should—that upon them the severest penalty of the law should fall. No; I desire it should fall upon those who, well knowing the consequences of their conduct—who, well knowing the falseness of their pretexts—who, well knowing the fatal effects that must flow from the doctrines they preach, evince a readiness to sacrifice everything to their passions and their selfish interests, and for their own purposes do not hesitate to involve their friendless and too credulous fellow-countrymen in the guilt of treason and the dangers of civil war. The persons I wish to see punished are those who have sufficient skill, who have sufficient information and intelligence to keep themselves free from such legal guilt as would bring them under the operation of the law, with the probability of a conviction, but who, nevertheless, are morally guilty in the eye of God and man of the crime of inciting to treason, murder, rebellion and civil war. I favor the measure now proposed chiefly because by its means we shall get rid of all doubts and difficulties—we shall have no more of those delays of the law—no more of that chicanery which encourages evil-doers in hope for ultimate escape, and which is certain to cause such procrastination that when at length the sword of justice falls, the example does not produce half the effect it ought to have."

In the House of Commons, Lord JOHN RUSSELL said:

"I believe in my conscience that this measure is calculated to prevent insurrection, to preserve internal peace, to preserve the unity of this Empire, and to save the throne of these realms and the free institutions of this country."

Sir ROBERT PEEL said:

"I, for one, am perfectly prepared to insist on no ordinary powers. I believe that the Government is justified in asking for this measure. I believe the measure itself—the power to apprehend on suspicion and keep the conspirators in confinement—is necessary. I will not urge on the Ministry measures of greater coercion than those their own responsibility demands; but this I say, as nothing but necessity can justify a suspension of the habeas corpus act, the same necessity makes immediate action desirable."

Mr. DISRAELI said:

"I think we ought not to hesitate to grant the Government the great and extraordinary powers for which they ask."

Mr. JOSEPH HUME, the leader of the Liberals, and always the fast friend of Ireland, said that he should —"be sorry to see any division on the measure now before the House."

The only fault found with the Ministers in the entire debate, was that they had not proposed the measure weeks and months before. And yet, even at that time, not a hostile gun had been fired in Ireland, nor an armed demonstration of any sort made. It was simply the shadow of a rebellion—a rebellion which a week afterward was put to flight by fifty armed policemen, and breathed its last gasp in Widow CARRICK's cabbage garden; it was simply the shadow of this thing that stirred Parliament to suspend the writ of habeas corpus by unanimous vote. And yet, while our own Government is confronted with a rebellion involving seven millions of persons, and, commanding an army of seven hundred thousand men, the vocabulary of abuse is exhausted because it has presumed to suspend the writ; and to bring their audacity to a climax, English liberty is put in contrast with American despotism.

LEGAL DECISION ON THE WAREHOUSING SYSTEM.—New-York importers will be interested in a decision which we publish this morning, made by Judge NELSON, in the United States Circuit Court. It seems that since the warehousing system was introduced, it has been not an unfrequent thing for merchants to enter their goods for warehousing, but before the goods were discharged from the vessels, to change their minds, and desire to enter them for consumption, possibly having sold them. On application to the Collector for liberty to change the entry of their goods in this way, they are informed that they can be allowed to do it upon payment of half a month's storage. This is in accordance with a regulation of the Treasury Department, made some years ago.

The plaintiffs in the case in question, being in this position, paid the half-month's storage to Mr. SCHELL, who was then Collector, but they paid it under protest, and brought suit against him to recover it as an involuntary payment.

The Judge, as will be seen, decides that there is no shadow of law for any such charge, and that the Collector might as well demand $100 or any other sum as the half month's storage; but he gives judgment for the defendant on the ground that it was not an involuntary payment, because the plaintiffs could have got their goods through the warehouse; and, moreover, as the charge "is imposed by a regulation of the Treasury, it is fair to presume that it goes to the Government," and the Collector ought not to be sued for it. We incline, for our part, to think that the presumption is fully as strong that it does not go to the Government, especially when we see in another part of the Judge's opinion that "the Government has no interest in the warehousing business."

The result of the Judge's view of the law, however, will be, that for all sums so paid heretofore the importers are without remedy. Whether they can, by the aid of astute counsel, devise some way of avoiding the difficulties which appeared in this case, remains to be seen.

But we submit to the Secretary of the Treasury that this regulation should not be allowed to stand a moment after such a decision as this. Here is a charge decided by the Circuit Court to be entirely without law—a mere taking of money from the pockets of importers simply because they desire something which the Government is not, perhaps, compelled to give, but the giving of which, as Judge NELSON says, "adds nothing to the labor or trouble of the officers of the Customs." It is beneath the dignity of a Government like ours to seize upon such a petty advantage. It should rather be earnest to accommodate the citizen without extra charge, where there is no extra trouble.

And the Secretary of the Treasury should lose no time in ordering the discontinuance of this "imposition," as Judge NELSON, with a doubtless unconscious double entendre, calls it.

The Conscription and the Money Exemption.

The Secretary of War seems still to be laboring under some difficulty in regard to the interpretation to be placed on the thirteenth section of the Conscription act. He is said to maintain that inasmuch as the language of the section is, that a conscript may provide a substitute or pay $300 to such person as the Secretary of War "may appoint," he (the Secretary) can, by failing to appoint any one to receive this money, render this portion of the section entirely nugatory, and thus oblige the conscript to serve, or provide a substitute in his own way, and at his own cost.

The Attorney-General, Mr. BATES, and the Solicitor of the War Department, Mr. WHITING, are said not to concur with Mr. STANTON in his view of the law. It is certainly contrary to the intent of the law-makers, as the debates on the bill fully prove; and it is also contrary to the spirit of the entire section and the letter of parts of it. For instance, while the section does say that the money offered in lieu of substitutes must be paid to such persons as the Secretary "may appoint," it also says that the sum to be thus accepted in lieu of substitutes "shall be fixed" at a uniform rate by a general order of the War Department "whenever a draft on any State is made."

The Secretary of War is said to justify his interpretation of the 13th section on the ground that unless his views prevail, the entire law will fail of its object, and the conscription obtain no men for the army. His idea is, that almost every drafted person will be able to buy off from the service by the payment of $300, and that the law will thus become a revenue measure, and not one to obtain recruits for the army. But inasmuch as the sole object of the law is to obtain men, not money, that interpretation, argues Mr. STANTON, must be adopted, according to well-settled principles, which will give the entire law efficacy according to its primary and fundamental purpose. And the only interpretation which will do this thing, is that which the Secretary places on it.

The argument is specious and plausible, but not at all sound—in this, that the Secretary of War assumes that the law will fail to yield men, if the $300 exemption clause is retained; whereas, that is only his conjecture and apprehension, and not by any means an ascertained fact. And it is an exceedingly unsafe principle to adopt that would permit any Cabinet Minister to evade or nullify a clear provision of public law affecting his Department, on the ground that, in his opinion, the operation of the law would otherwise be different from what the law-makers intended, and the Government required. Such a rule and practice would ignore the authority and discretion of Congress wholly, and clothe any member of the Executive Department with power to execute or nullify the public laws at pleasure.

We assume that Mr. STANTON is bound to accept and execute the Conscription law, in all its parts, in the sense in which its framers intended, and the public mind, almost without exception, has understood and approved it. Whether it will afford soldiers or not, when thus administered, remains to be seen. If it fails, as Mr. STANTON fears it will, then an appropriate remedy can and will be found—of this, no one need have any fear. If no better remedy can be hit upon, the President, in view of the failure of a vital law, absolutely necessary to keep up the armies, and secure the public defence, might declare martial law in all the States, and by virtue of the danger to the republic, order the Conscription to be en*forced, regardless of the money clause of the* 13th Section. But such an extreme step would have necessity to justify it, and could excite none of the vexatious opposition that a premature attempt on the part of the Secretary of War to nullify a plain provision of law would be so well calculated to provoke.

With all respect, however, to Mr. STANTON's apprehensions in regard to the Conscription, we are free to say, in our opinion, his fears will prove wholly unfounded. We believe that a very large number of the drafted persons will neither pay $300 nor procure substitutes. But, if a vast majority should pay the exemption fee, the Government will be able to abundantly replenish the army with the funds thus raised. Money, according to universal experience in all ages, is the chief "sinew of war." The loyal States have sent more than a million of men to the field thus far. Many will come back and be citizens again; but tens and hundreds of thousands have learnt the trade of soldiering—have lost the taste for labor at home, and become enamored of the excitement, the unrestraint and the "glory" of camp life. Give Government the money and it can keep a mighty army of these men in the field, who will be far more valuable as soldiers than three times the number of new men they may draft.

COTTON.—It cannot be doubted that the fall of Vicksburgh and the opening of the Mississippi, will give exit to a good deal of cotton. Nearly all of it in Western Tennessee—in the cotton-growing region between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers—has already got out, by one means or another, during the year in which our armies have been in that part of the State; but a great deal of the crop of the last two seasons in Mississippi and Southern Arkansas, still remains on the plantations in those States. Col. GRIERSON saw much of it during his ride through the central part of Mississippi; and while GRANT's army was encamped near the Southern line of Arkansas, scouts saw plenty of it in that section—only a trifling fraction of which was brought away from the region near the river. Recent naval excursions up Deer Creek, in the Yazoo country, and in Red River and other Southwestern streams, have also found cotton—in some places in great abundance.

But, even if GRANT captures Vicksburgh and PORTER's fleet ride to and fro from Memphis to New-Orleans, some time must elapse before the cotton in the Mississippi Valley can be brought out. It will be impossible for traders to penetrate the country to obtain it, as rebel guerrillas will everywhere abound; and, doubtless, when it is found that the river and the adjoining country are irrevocably in our control, these guerrillas will proceed to fire the cotton on the plantations, in obedience to the orders of JEFF. DAVIS.

We observe by our London letter that a line of steamers is being built in England expressly to bring cotton from New-Orleans—one of which has already been launched. The manufacturers there are sanguine of its speedy arrival, and are building new mills, and filling them with machinery, to be ready for it. It is to be hoped they will not be disappointed; but in any event, and with the best fortune to our Western army, it is not likely they will get many bales before Autumn.

QUICK SUCCESSION OF BATTLES.—We showed, a day or two ago, that from the opening of this month up to the 14th inst., Gen. GRANT had fought four considerable battles with the rebels in the vicinity of Vicksburgh, in each and all of which he had been successful. We have now to add a fifth, fought on Saturday last, which seems to be much the greatest of all, and equally successful with any of them. It appears that after the battle of the 14th, which resulted in the capture of Jackson, Gen. GRANT, abandoning that place, followed the rebels along the line of railroad in the direction of Vicksburgh, attacked them, under Gen. PEMBERTON, near Edwards' Depot, and, says Gen. JOHNSTON's official report, "after nine hours' fighting," the rebels were again compelled to fall back. The latest rebel intelligence would seem to show that GRANT's forces had then for the sixth time moved up to the attack; for we learn from a telegram in a Mobile journal that by Monday last he had advanced eight miles north, and on that morning found the rebel army under Gen. JOHNSTON in line of battle. At this critical moment we are again left in the dark. It is not likely, however, that much time was lost in beginning the attack.

The engagement of last Saturday seems to have been a very severe one. The fact that PEMBERTON, who commands at Vicksburgh, came out himself to offer battle, is significant, and a rebel dispatch says he admits his loss to have been 3,000 men, and Gen. TILGHMAN, of Fort Henry memory, killed. The rebel army there seems now to be divided into two or three bodies; one under Gen. PEMBERTON, at the railroad bridge crossing the Big Black River, twelve miles back from Vicksburgh; that of Gen. JOHNSTON some miles further up the same stream, and a third under Gen. LORING, locality unknown. Gen. GRANT, thus far in his struggle, has always beat the enemy in detail, and his auguries for success in the last great effort are excellent.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 22.

TRADE ON THE RIO GRANDE.

Information has been received here from an American official in Mexico, who says that the occupation of the Rio Grande frontier would interfere largely with the New-York traders in that region dealing with rebels. They justify themselves in the illicit trade by saying that in exchanging every kind of rebel supplies for cotton, they are benefitting the Union. The rebels are building privateers in Europe with the proceeds of Texas cotton, which is seized and contributed by the State authorities to what is known as the gunboat fund. Brazos is made the rendezvous for the Texas navy, and, in the language of his letter, the first thing we know we will be terribly mortified at what we hear from there. He says nearly all classes of goods can be bought in Brownsville, Texas, as cheap as in New-Orleans. Refugees and deserters are constantly arriving in Mexico from Texas, bringing news that the Union men still hold out faithful, though heartsick at repeated disappointments. The rebels have made HAMILTON's wife a hostage, to check his labors in the North.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE CASE.

As soon as Judge WYLIE had to-day discharged the fugitive slave HALL, on the ground that the Fugitive Slave law is inapplicable in the District, the claimant seized the boy again, just outside the Court-room, without process, and attempted forcibly to carry him off. The boy's counsel and other bystanders interfered and prevented the act. The boy was then put under the protection of the Marshal and sent to the contraband camp. This case decides over a couple of hundred others, involving the same principle.

REAR-ADMIRAL A. H. FOOTE.

I am assured of the entire recovery of this gallant commander from the wounds received at Fort Donelson. He laid aside his crutches about three weeks since, and has offered his services to the Secretary of the Navy, ready for a command afloat, and anxious to again take an active part in subduing the rebellion. He is now, as he has been since his partial recovery, at the head of the important Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting for the Navy, in this city.

PAY OF THE SOLDIERS.

The payments made to the army within the last fortnight have amounted to $21,000,000. There are still unpaid $16,000,000. The troops yet unpaid are Gen. GRANT's, Gen. ROSECRANS', Gen. SEGEWICK's, Gen. HEINTZELMAN's, and Gen. PRICE's. The money is all ready for the Potomac army whenever the pay-rolls are ready. Paymasters are now in New-York with the funds, en route to all the coast expeditions.

SUBSTITUTES IN THE SOUTH.

The Richmond journals contain advertisements offering $3,000 for substitutes.

THE CASE OF COL. D'UTASSY.

The D'Utassy Court-martial made up a verdict, and adjourned to-day. His sentence is understood to be quite severe.

NEGRO SOLDIERS ATTACKED.

Two mustered, but unarmed companies of the negro regiments raised here were attacked while passing through Georgetown, this evening, by a band of Pro-Slavery ruffians. They turned upon their assailants, routed them, and beat some of them in a most wholesome manner. One of the rowdies was hurt very badly.

SENTENCES REMITTED.

The President, in general orders, just issued, remits the sentence of death against sundry privates convicted of deserting, they having been arrested and tried before the time fixed in his proclamation for the voluntary return of deserters.

DISMISSED.

A general order of the War Department dismisses from the service Lieut. CHARLES LUHAN, Seventeenth Connecticut Volunteers, for furnishing a descriptive list of a man of his company to an unauthorized person, disregarding the general order on the subject. The Secretary of War has directed that the order be read at the head of every company and regiment in the army.

RETURNED.

Secretary CHASE and Gov. SEWARD returned this morning from the army, having spent some twelve hours at Gen. HOOKER's headquarters.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 22.

MORE CAPTURES OF BLOCKADE RUNNERS.

The Navy Department is advised that the steamer R. E. Cuyler, on the 6th inst., captured, off Mobile, while attempting to run the blockade, the steamer Eugenie. She is a new sidewheel vessel, very fast, one hundred tons burden, and was fitted out in New-York, several weeks since. She sailed thence for Havana and Nassau, for the purpose, it was supposed, of loading with arms and ammunition.

The supply steamer Union, while on her way to New-York, captured the English steamer Lodona, with an assorted contraband cargo.

The gunboat Kenosha, on the 1st inst., captured the schooner Dart, while trying to run the blockade off Mobile, with an assorted cargo. The same vessel captured the schooner Clara, on the 25th ult.

The United States schooner Richard Stevens, captured the schooner Nymph at Pass Cabello, Texas, on the 23d ult. She was loaded with coffee, medicines, dry goods, shoes, etc.

THE THIRTY-FIRST NEW-YORK.

A change having been made in the programme, Quartermaster GRECOUT says the Thirty-first New-York will reach that City Saturday, a day earlier than was expected.

NAVAL ORDERS.

Commander RODGERS PERRY has been ordered to the steamship Wabash, at Callao, Peru; Assistant Surgeon H. P. BABCOCK to the Wabash, the flagship of Admiral DUPONT's squadron; Capt. THEODORE P. GREEN to command the steam sloop-of-war Shenandoah; Lieut.-Commander MONTGOMERY SIMMS ordered to temporary ordnance duty at Washington; Lieut.-Commander JOSEPH S. S. KENNEY ordered to the steam sloop Shenandoah; Capt. HENRY S. STELLWAGEN ordered to the command of the sloop-of-war Constellation, in the Mediterranean; Acting Assistant Surgeons M. A. MILNE and N. W. PARKER ordered to the Mississippi squadron.

AMUSEMENTS.

HARRY SANDERSON IN BROOKLYN.—To-night, at the Brooklyn Academy, Mr. HARRY SANDERSON, a young pianist of great talent and much culture, will give a grand concert. He will be assisted by Mr. GOTTSCHALK, Miss JENNY KEMPTON, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. WM. CASTLE and a host of other talent. In the present dearth of music in Brooklyn this concert will prove a most grateful and timely attraction.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The extra performance at this establishment to-day for the benefit of Signor BELLINI, the admirable baritone, will undoubtedly attract an overflowing audience. The opera selected for the occasion is PERSIANI's very popular "Ione," one which shows off all the artists to advantage, and gives Madame GUERRABELLA the best role she has yet had before our public.

MR. BERGMANN'S BENEFIT.—This event, which is of as much importance to the public as to the beneficiare, takes place to-night at Irving Hall. As an orchestral conductor—especially of works of the modern school—Mr. BERGMANN has no superior. This fact has been fully recognized by the members of the Philharmonic Society, who have volunteered en masse. The public will, we hope, do the same. The programme is unusually interesting, opening with a symphony by LISZT, called "Faust," now to this country (and almost every other) and played for the first time. RICHARD WAGNER is represented by the "Introduction to Lohengrin;" HECTOR BERLIOZ, by the splendid "Carnival Romaine" overture, and SCHUMANN, by his best pianoforte concerto (played by Mr. S. B. MILLS). Madame JOHANNSEN is the vocalist of the occasion.

The Returning Regiments.

ARRIVAL OF A PORTION OF THE THIRD REGIMENT NEW-YORK ARTILLERY.

The steamers Ellen S. Terry and Thomas Collins from Newbern, N. C., having on board 537 men of the Third New-York artillery regiment, are expected to arrive at this port at an early hour this morning. The regiment was originally the Nineteenth infantry of this State, and has been under the command of Major-Gens. SANFORD, MANSFIELD, PARVANCE, BANKS, MCCLELLAN, BURNSIDE and FOSTER. Brig.-Gen. LESLIE will return with the regiment, which will take temporary quarters at the Park Barracks. Thence they will proceed to Cayuga County, the place of enlistment. The regiment has been engaged in several severe fights, and on its banner are inscribed the names of eight battle fields. The number of men originally enlisted in the regiment and since recruited was 1,706, of which number 187 were lost in the service. The number of men remaining in the field is 992.

RECEPTION OF THE THIRTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

A detachment of the Seventy-first regiment N. Y. N. G. will parade this afternoon to participate in the reception of the Thirty-first regiment. See advertisement.

DRS. R. & J. HUNTER, PHYSICIANS FOR AFFECTIONS OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS.

Office No. 632 Broadway. Hours of consultation, 9 A. M. to 5 P. M.

Drs. R. & J. HUNTER devote their whole attention to the treatment of Affections or Diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Heart. In applying their undivided efforts to this important specialty in medicine, they have been stimulated to act, not only by the calm indifference with which general practitioners regarded the terrible mortality and suffering attending throat and lung diseases, but also by the remarkable successes which followed the direct and local treatment so largely advocated and practiced by Drs. HUNTER years since.

It is but just to remind the people of New-York, that during those years when the practice of Drs. HUNTER was so great as to break down their own health, by the close office confinement incident thereto, the mortality from Consumption, as shown by the City Inspector's Books, diminished upward of thirty per cent.! Such facts as these defy cavil.

In reestablishing the practice again in New-York, Drs. HUNTER are happy to be able to refer to many prominent citizens, who retain the benefits they derived years ago from the direct treatment of their cases—in Catarrh—Bronchitis—Consumption—Asthma, &c., by Inhalations, and such other means as were prescribed for them, on the principle of direct and local treatment. Many others of more recent experience can add their testimony in favor of the treatment. Drs. HUNTER think it right to direct attention to these facts, as encouragement for those who may feel disposed to consult them, and whose condition of health requires their services.

DR. VON EISENBERG.
Author of "Surgical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the Ear, with his new Mode of Treatment."
NEW TESTIMONY.
"New-York, May 6.
I was entirely deaf in my left ear, accompanied by a discharge. I placed myself under Dr. VON EISENBERG's care, who, by his great skill, restored me to perfect hearing, in the short space of a few minutes, without giving me the slightest pain; and the discharge has ceased entirely. The Eustachian Tube, which was obliterated, is quite open, and I feel that the ear-passage performs its functions. I am simply satisfied, and recommend every one suffering from impaired hearing to place themselves under the treatment of this eminent and successful physician.
THOMAS GRAHAM, No. [illegible]-st."
"New-York, May 5, 1868.
I have great pleasure in testify to the skill of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I went into my office almost completely deaf, and came out with my perfect hearing. It is nearly twelve months since, and the hearing is perfect. The operation, which lasted two or three minutes by watch, gave me no pain whatever. I, with confidence, recommend all sufferers to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's unsurpassing skill.

No. 6 Maiden-st., Greenpoint, L. I."
"West Hoboken, N.-Y., New-York, Feb. 6, 1868.
I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most enlisted practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.
I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.
JOHN TAYLOR.
"New-York, July 20, 1866.
This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her mouth a great quantity of matter, together with congealed blood, relieving her immediately, and all without pain. She is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

J. R. VON EISENBERG, M. D.—Dear Doctor: I have been afflicted with total deafness, and was induced to pay you a visit. No one can imagine my delight when after one operation, my hearing was suddenly, and without pain, restored to me, for which I feel very grateful. After being totally deaf—almost shut out from the pleasure of using an necessary a sense—to have it returned, and to hear so distinctly, reflects great credit on you for the immense amount of skill you possess. They to thank you for what I can so truly appreciate. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON.
CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ
New-York, March 26, 1868.
"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely clogged up accompanied by a constant discharge of the thick, pale mucus, running over the throat, and, but for the great relief afforded by Dr. Von Eisenberg's treatment, I should have suffered much longer. I can now breathe freely through both nostrils, and the discharge has ceased. I cheerfully recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
For promoting the Growth, and preserving the Beauty of THE HUMAN HAIR.
The Inventors of COCOAINE—knowing that when the loss of hair occurs, it is generally from that part of the head where the greatest heat is necessarily generated, and that animal fat, as Bear's Grease, Lard, &c., &c., by their unique influence heat rather than alleviate it—turned their attention and pharmaceutical science towards Vegetable Oils, as the basis of a medicament to promote the growth, and preserve the beauty of the hair. The Cocoa Grove, or
COCOA-NUT OIL,
Presented itself strongly, as possessing many properties peculiarly adapted for the purpose; but its odor was objectionable, and its density (except when exposed to heat) seemed for a long time to defy all efforts to render it available, in the cooler climates, for popular use. BY A SCIENTIFIC SELECTION OF OTHER INGREDIENTS, THOSE WHICH WILL CHEMICALLY COMBINE WITH THE OIL HAVE BEEN DISCOVERED, and they together have produced a topical compound, which is unqualifiedly pronounced to be the best which has yet appeared.
In the form here presented this Oil is PERMANENTLY DEODORIZED, and held in a combination which peculiarly adapts it for the toilet. It is UNRIVALED IN DELICACY AND AGREEABLENESS, COOLING IN ITS NATURE, AND POSSESSES SUCH A PENETRATING AFFINITY FOR THE SECRETIONS OF THE SKIN, THAT IT IS RAPIDLY ABSORBED.
This Oil allays irritation, removes all tendency to dandruff, and invigorates the action of the capillaries to the highest degree. ITS EFFECT UPON THE GLOSSINESS AND RICHNESS OF THE APPEARANCE OF THE HAIR IS SUCH AS CANNOT BE SURPASSED, and it is offered to the public in the firm belief that it will supersede all other preparations. Its unprecedented popularity in all parts of the country is the best evidence of its merit.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.
The superiority of this preparation consists in its choice material, and delightful perfume, rendering it a perfect hair preparation.
We are confident that no one who may make a trial of its efficacy will be willing to return to the use of any other preparation.
The proprietors would also call attention to the fact that it is the cheapest Hair Dressing yet offered to the public, QUANTITY and QUALITY considered.

UNION
CALL OF THE LOYAL NATIONAL LEAGUES.
CONVENTION OF LOYAL LEAGUES.
The undersigned, in the name of the Loyal National Leagues established in every County of the State of New-York, and of other Loyal Leagues, respectfully invite delegates from all similar organizations in the State to assemble for Convention at MECHANICS' HALL, UTICA,
ON THE MORNING OF TUESDAY, MAY 26, 1868,
AT 11 O'CLOCK,
To unite in a State organization, and to consider plans for the furtherance of the objects stated in the following pledge:
We pledge ourselves to unconditional loyalty to the Government of the United States, to unwavering support of its officers, to crush the rebellion, and to spare no endeavor to maintain uninjured the National unity, both in principle and territorial boundary.
The primary object of this League is, and shall be, to bind together all loyal men, of all trades and professions, in a common union, to maintain the power, glory and integrity of the Nation.
For their own part, and for the part of their associate Leagues, the undersigned distinctly state that the proceedings of the Convention shall be open and public, and no action shall be taken of a partisan character. The organizations that for personal ends have sought, by political derision, to divide loyal men, shall be ignored.
In making this call, the undersigned hope to realize the loyal men of the State of the powerful influence which such an organization may exert in support of the Government and in the encouragement of loyal sentiment.
The Anti-Copperhead League, in a few years revolutionized the public sentiment of Ohio, and was a potent agent for which it was established. If such a result could be obtained by an organization separate from party, on a question of political economy, what may not be expected of a Loyal National League, based on loyalty to the Government, of our fathers, and a pledge to maintain unbroken the national unity of this proud and peaceful country?
Each League is requested to send as many Delegates as convenient, and the Convention will decide on the basis of representation.
The Ward Leagues of New-York and Kings County are invited to cooperate.
The Convention is expected to take part in the proceedings of the mass meetings on the 27th, called by the Loyal Leagues of Union Citizens.

Its route is along the White Water Valley, from Hamilton to Union, a distance of about sixty miles, and passes through the richest, best cultivated and most densely populated portion of the State of Indiana.

The road is the CENTRAL SECTION of the otherwise completed TRUNK LINE, connecting the great Southwest at LOUISVILLE, Ky., on the Ohio River, and at an early day with TOLEDO and SANDUSKY, on Lake Erie.

The Company is wholly without debt (except its bonded debt) and being strong in its local traffic, and connecting with roads that must necessarily largely increase the volume of its revenues, the BOARD OF DIRECTORS, with great confidence, invite the attention of capitalists to these securities, believing that they offer an opportunity for a first-class railroad investment, than which, in their judgment, there has better is to be had.

The published exhibits of the Company, together with a map showing the locality and adjacents of the Road, can be had from either of the Trustees of the Deed of Trust, in this City, named below, and from either of whom the bonds are only to be had.

THE DUTIES OF THE HOUR.

Meeting of Loyal Citizens—Addresses by Wm. Curtis Noyes, C. S. Fredrichsham and Henry J. Raymond.

A very fine audience assembled at the Republican Central Committee Rooms, corner of Broadway and Twenty-third-street, last evening, in response to a call for a meeting of loyal citizens to hear addresses on "The Duties and Necessities of the Hour." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Republican Central Committee.

Wm. Curtis Noyes, Esq., was chosen to preside, and previous to introducing the speakers, made a brief address, believing thoroughly the objects of the meeting and the efforts of the Government in putting down the rebellion by a vigorous prosecution of the war. He congratulated them upon the recent successes of the Union army in the West, and the decline of Copperheadism. He adjured them to strike all the blows they could at treason in all its forms, however insidious or however open, until it should be exterminated. He congratulated them upon the fact that the retribution of Heaven had already hit upon the capital of Mississippi, the house of Jefferson Davis, the great repudiator, and had consumed the records of the disgrace of that State—the records of State repudiation. (Applause.)

In conclusion, he introduced Rev. C. S. Fredrichsham.

SPEECH OF REV. MR. FREDRICHSHAM.

Mr. Fredrichsham commenced by saying that while it was warm there, it was much warmer at Fredrichsburgh, Chancellorsville and Vicksburgh. (Laughter and applause.) The first duty of the hour was to sustain the Administration with cordial support. By that he meant Abraham Lincoln. (Applause.) It was our duty to do that unquestionably, so long as the Government was loyal. If the President was weak, it was our duty, so much the more, to strengthen him. No man could conscientiously say he believed that the President was disloyal. (Applause.) Mr. Lincoln was loyal to Republican ideas. Even Count Gurowski, in that bitter book of his, accusing everyone in authority in Washington, said of Mr. Lincoln:

"President Lincoln has in his heart a profound love of republican ideas. He believes in the people, and he will carry through this war to the end, with principles of republican liberty, unless he is hindered in his heavy career by assassins (—applause)—and, when the war is over, amid all the confusion, amid all the disgrace that may come, the republican principle will be carried safely in the bosom of Abraham Lincoln as in a casket which nobody can break open." (Applause.)

Mr. Fredrichsham advocated the fullest liberty of speech consistent with the safety of the Republic, excepting from the class of speakers who should be prevented those who are guilty of demoralizing the army, stopping the conscription, embarrassing the Government, or obstructing the campaign. (Applause.) The only way to be sure of ending the war and securing peace was by collecting all the fighting element of the country and putting it to work as the most effective peace party. (Applause.)

Mr. Noyes next introduced Mr. Wm. Cross Wallace, who recited his famous ode, "Keep Step with the Music of Union," which elicited universal applause.

MR. NOYES COMPLIMENTS THE TIMES.

In introducing Mr. Raymond, Mr. Noyes said: You are all familiar with the New-York Times. (Applause.) One thing for which we are all indebted to him is that it has never tolerated in the slightest degree that outrageous heresy that any foreign intervention in our affairs is ever to be permitted. (Applause.) I render here my public thanks for the able and masterly views which have been taken upon that question in that sheet. It has never, moreover, tolerated that other heresy—although it is an advocate of State sovereignty within legitimate limits, and in subordination to the provisions of the National Constitution—that other shameful heresy, that a State in the exercise of its sovereignty can enslave any of its own citizens, except for crime, of which the party shall be lawfully convicted by a jury of his country. (Applause.) I pronounce that opinion one of the worst heresies of this age. So far as I know, it has never found a particle of sympathy in the New-York Times. I have great pleasure, therefore, in presenting to you Hon. Henry J. Raymond. (Applause.) connected with and the responsible editor of the New-York Times, one of the distinguished men of the time. (Applause.)

SPEECH OF HON. HENRY J. RAYMOND.

Mr. Raymond said he felt not only highly complimented, but also embarrassed by the entirely undeserved eulogies just passed. He believed it was true that the Times had never sustained either of the heresies referred to; but, he should quite as soon think of claiming for that sheet particular credit, in this community, for not having advocated murder as one of the fine arts, as for either of the virtues mentioned. (Applause and laughter.) He had sometimes thought that it might be well if we could all stop talking, and stop writing, and stop printing, and go to work fighting, as that seems to be the only way to end the war. (Applause.) But, the habit of our people was to talk, even while fighting, and, perhaps he might as well take his part in the general confabulation. He did not intend to enter into an argument upon the agitating, or controverted questions of the day, but, to fix their minds upon the one great idea—the solemn and imperative duty of their being united in supporting the Government and in putting down the rebellion which threatens the national life. Ours was the first attempt ever made to establish a nation upon the principle that the people are the rightful source of all power. The two principles embodied were—first, sufficient freedom for every individual who is a citizen and subject of that Government, to prosecute his own calling and pursue his own happiness, in his own way, in the full and free exercise of his own abilities, without molestation from anything or anybody else, so long as he trespasses upon nobody else's rights; and second, a National Government sufficiently strong to defend itself against the world in arms, if the world in arms should come to assail its rights. (Applause.) Under these principles, our nation had grown in wealth, population, strength and power, until now, when we were obliged to take up arms to resist an attempt upon the life of the nation. They should resist that attempt as they would an attempt upon their individual lives. Was not the duty as much higher as the rights and happiness of twenty millions of people were more valuable than the rights and happiness of one? The Union of the nation must be preserved. They must do it in person when called upon; they must give what aid they could contribute; they must certainly support the Government which is the embodiment of the nation—not because it was the Administration of Abraham Lincoln, or because it was a Republican Administration; because it was Pro-Slavery or Anti-Slavery but because it was trying to crush the rebellion. They had a right to their personal opinions and preferences, and for any grievance the tribunals of the land were open to them. Under no circumstances did they submit to the, whether it was the Fugitive Slave law, the Conscription law or the law against the freedom of the Press—any law upon the statute books that has not been pronounced unconstitutional by a Court of competent authority. It was their duty to give such laws their united support, and whoever lifted his hand against them, joined with the men who would strike down the Government, and destroy the life of the nation. It seemed to him that was a platform upon which all could stand, and postpone their differences for future settlement. He cautioned them against being discouraged at the apparently slow progress of the war, calling their attention to the blunders of the British Government; the delay in transporting, feeding and caring for the health of troops; the year of digging and trenching before Sebastopol; the unsuccessful bombardment; the successive military mistakes developed in Mr. Kinglake's history of the Crimea, showing that in our lack of generalship, in our changes of command and in our defeats, we have been more than paralleled by England's last campaign. He guarded them against depression on account of severe criticisms from those who were the previous associates of the same censure which they dealt out to us; cautioning them to bear in mind the totally unprepared condition in which we entered upon the most herculean military task ever conceived. He warned them not to hope too fondly for the appearance of some master mind who should set all things right, saying that our reliance was not upon any man, any party, or any political policy, but, upon the power and stability of the American people determined to save the country from ruin. He expressed his confidence in the belief that even if the Democratic party should obtain power before the subjugation of the rebels, the American people would compel the prosecution of the war, and the Democratic party dare not refuse. He characterized much of the opposition to the Administration as proceeding from party spirit, and said of the Copperheads that that particular reptile forms but a small proportion of the great zoological collection of the American people. He said that when a man by speech gave aid and comfort to the enemy, the Constitution pronounced him a traitor, and he ought to suffer a traitor's doom. (Applause.) He did not think there was any danger of our losing our liberties at the North, but that the apparition that we were about to lose them was a dangerous and mischievous one, unless properly met. But, in spite of the loud outcries, he did not believe there was any intention to carry out the threats made in this connection. He cited the prosperity of England during the twenty years' war, and the beneficial results which have been conferred on other countries from revolutions which at first seemed disastrous; and aimed destructive of national vitality, drawing the conclusion that if Americans do their duty in this crisis, all will be well in the future. He accepted Gen. Butler's idea of "building up our house with all the modern improvements;" but urged that the question was not now how to begin up the house anew, but how to extinguish the flames which have enveloped it. He thought it was best to put out the fire first, and then we could settle among ourselves about the mode of rebuilding.

HUMAN SYSTEM

has not been equalled in the history of any other article in Materia Medica, and it is acknowledged to be the very great power in the cure of many obstinate diseases over which other remedies have little or no influence.

Iodine was discovered in the year 1813, and received its name from the Greek word which heads this article. It is an element, obtained from seaweed, is very volatile, and has great control over

SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS.

It acts upon the

HEART,

LIVER, KIDNEYS,

DIGESTIVE ORGANS AND GLANDULAR SYSTEM.

It neutralizes metallic mercury and all the mercurial compounds that can possibly exist in the living body.

THE TONIC

properties of Iodine is unknown, by its strengthening the digestive organs, and increasing the appetite, in cases of Dyspepsia, Emaciation and Debility; an increased nutrition of the body is the result of the employment of Iodine. The patient recovers flesh, strength and color; hitherto pale, relaxed and feeble, he becomes full, strong and florid.

The unparalleled success in private practice and the indorsement of entitles it to universal trial.

IODINE WATER.

A solution of pure iodine in pure water, is a specific for the cure of Scrofula in all the manifold forms, Consumption, Cancer, Heart, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Affections, Female Weaknesses, Dyspepsia, Syphilis, and the only remedy for the successful extraction of Mercurial Poisons.

I.

LABOULAYE'S GREAT WORK,

PARIS IN AMERICA.

Translated by Miss Mary L. Booth.

1 Vol. 12mo. 374 pages. Price $1 75.

"This work has excited marked attention in France, where, although it is somewhat wounding to the self-love of the French nation, it passed in two weeks to a third edition; while it exhibits an intimate knowledge of American peculiarities, that Americans in Paris refuse to believe that the author has never visited this country, which, however, is the case."

Rev. Dr. McClintock, writing from Paris, says:

"All Paris is laughing and Americans rejoicing over Laboulaye's new book—its delicate irony, its sharp raillery, its caricature, &c. It is having an extraordinary run; two editions have been exhausted in a fortnight."

The New-York Evening Post says:

"Science, history, drollery and instruction have been happily blended. The dialogues in which his characters engage are marked with nice sense, sound wisdom, as well as biting wit."

From Meinhold, Correspondent of the N. Y. Times.

"The author deals such hard blows at certain high dignitaries in France, that only it is attributed to not seeing the book mired the Police. It is an important and most entertaining book."

II.

The subject of hybridization, Hybridity, Degeneracy, and the formation of Varieties, as bearing on the question of Unity or Diversity of Origin, are discussed at length.

Elegantly illustrated, with One Hundred and Twenty-seven Beautiful Engravings. In one large octavo volume, handsomely printed on fine paper. Price $2. Copies sent by mail on receipt of price.

Extract of a Letter from Maj.-Gen. McClellan.

I regard it as very valuable addition to our military literature. Illustrations far not confined to officers of cavalry alone, but it contains a great deal of general information valuable to officers of the other arms of service.

Extract of a letter from the Army and Navy Gazette.

So very little has been said by English and American military writers on this branch of the service, that the want of such a work at this one before us has been anxiously felt by the officers of our army, and now that this gap in our military literature has been filled, and filled too, in such a masterly manner, they should return their thanks to the author, and to the publisher, all well who place the book at their disposal in such alluring style.
